Indiana Hit By Cold, Asks UMW to Dig Needed Coal

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The embattled State of Indiana, hit by cold weather and running short of soft coal supplies, yesterday appeared to be the crucial sector of the local coal strike front.

Gov. Henry F. Schriker "in a spirit of desperation" called on John L. Lewis and the striking United Mine Workers to provide coal to meet the "urgent need" in his State.

Lewis, who on Wednesday had offered to hold separate contract negotiations with the Indiana coal producers—an offer quickly rejected by the operators—urged the Governor to put pressure on the State coal industry to meet with the union over the bargaining table.

The Indiana coal operators, through a spokesman, declared in effect that Lewis was engaging in a war of nerves, and insisted they could not break away from the National Bituminous Conference and make a separate agreement with the union to end the strike which has been under way since September 19.

No New Steel Moves

On the steel front, there were no new major acceptances of the Bethlehem peace formula. The CIO Steelworkers, on strike since October 1, let it be officially known yesterday that the Bethlehem formula, and not the presidential fact-finding board's recommendations, was the basis for peace in the industry. The union also let it be known that the Bethlehem formula gave them more than the fact-finding recommendations.

There was, however, some question over whether the union was getting more or less in over-all benefits. The union had originally insisted on getting both non-contributory pensions and social insurance—as urged by the fact-finding board. The Bethlehem formula provides non-contributory pensions but also contributory social insurance.

The fact-finding board had also recommended that the steel companies provide up to 6 cents an hour per worker in pensions, and

Funds Source For D. C. Land Agency Found

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency has just informed Mark Lansburgh, District Development Land Agency chairman, that loans under the Housing Act of 1949 may be used to activate the moribund District slum clearance agency.

In a legal opinion, the Federal agency specifically mentioned the hire of staff personnel, office rental and essential supplies necessary for preparing redevelopment project plans as proper expenditures.

Lansburgh, whom Congress the past three consecutive years has denied such administrative funds, last night hailed the Federal ruling as "thrilling news."

He said he was primarily interested in first employing a qualified, full-time redevelopment expert at a minimum $10,000 salary to "break the city's slum clearance log jam."

"I want somebody to spearhead the drive," said Lansburgh, "who can keep in constant touch with the several local agencies playing a part under our redevelopment laws."

The Federal housing decision came in response to a letter from Lansburgh on behalf of the recently formed District Coordinating Committee on Housing and Redevelopment.

The committee wanted to know whether the stymied land agency would be eligible for financial assistance to set up an administrative staff, rent office space and to purchase supplies.

A House amendment to the new Housing Act blocking loans direct from the Housing and Home Finance Agency on projects (Marshall Heights and Barry Farms) that Congress had previously rejected had been construed by some as also a block against general administrative funds for the land agency.

Asking for clarification on this point, Lansburgh told Raymond E. Foley, HHFA administrator, that the question is a "vital one."

Lansburgh added: "Unless funds can be secured under the 1949 act to activate the land agency, there does not seem to be any way in which the land agency can func-

U. S. Charges $14-Million Gaming Ring

By Benjamin C. Bradlee

The Government told a District Court jury yesterday that William "Snags" Lewis heads a gambling syndicate that does a yearly business of as much as 14 million dollars.

Opening the Government's case against Lewis and 13 others charged with violating District gambling laws, Prosecutor William Hitz said the Government will prove also:

1. The syndicate has extensive Washington "banking facilities," including a Northwest credit company.

2. "A modest frame bungalow" at 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, Md., was remodeled 18 months ago "at a cost of several thousands of dollars" to serve as syndicate headquarters. The remodeling included installation of two armored doors and a one-way peephole, Hitz said.

Tells of Raid in March

3. Much of the syndicate's multimillion-dollar business was conducted in Washington, and Washington persons who actually placed bets with the Lewis syndicate will be produced in court.

4. "Tens of thousands of numbers slips . . . two truckloads of gambling paraphernalia . . . just under $25,000 in cash, and 14 adding machines were seized at the headquarters when United States deputy marshals raided the place March 25."

Hitz's estimate of the 14 million dollars he says the Lewis syndicate does doubles an estimate he made in court less than two weeks ago. United States Attorney George Morris Fay has said that gambling is a 100-million-dollar-a-year business in Washington. Fay has called Lewis a "big-shot gambler."

The four attorneys for the defendants set the pattern of their defense yesterday, by rising to object, often in unison, to virtually every question Hitz asked the five Government witnesses who testified. The attorneys are Charles E. Ford, Myron G. Ehrlich, Bernard Margolis and William N. Collins.

At the conclusion of the session, Judge Matthew F. McGuire turned to the defense lawyers and said: "Now listen. You make an objection, and I'll rule on it. I don't want any argument about it. Let's understand that . . . No, I'm not mad."

Earlier, Judge McGuire told the four, "one counsel will be permitted to object and one alone" on a single question.

The lawyers admit they hope to prevent the case from reaching the jury. Motions to dismiss the indictment, suppress the evidence and return property seized at the time of the raid already have been denied by other judges. Defense

Pilot Rallies From Setback At Crash News

Erick Rios Bridoux rallied last night after he suffered a severe setback in his battle for life upon learning he was the only one of 56 persons to survive Tuesday's air disaster.

The 29-year-old Bolivian P-38 pilot became "morose" and ceased to "cooperate" in efforts to overcome a broken back, three broken ribs, pneumonia and multiple lacerations, his physician at Alexandria Hospital said.

"I felt so very, very bad at 4 a. m. that I thought I was going to die," Bridoux told an official of his government yesterday afternoon.

By early last night, 54 bodies had been recovered and 53 positively identified. Fifty-five persons died in the midair collision between Bridoux's plane and an Eastern Air Lines four-engine DC-4 passenger liner. Bridoux was the only survivor.

At 10 p. m., a physician at Alexandria Hospital said Bridoux had improved steadily during the afternoon and evening. He was "much better than last night," although his condition could be described best as "fairly good," the physician said.

The pilot's personal doctor about four hours earlier said that Bri-

U. S. Weighs Three-Power Conference

By Ferdinand Kuhn

Secretary Acheson is considering a trip to Paris at short notice, probably within a few days, to discuss Germany and other pending problems with the Foreign Ministers of Great Britain and France.

State Department officials said last night that plans for such a meeting were being worked out in messages between Washington, London and Paris. They said the meeting would be a continuation of the three foreign ministers' discussions in Washington last September.

Although a final decision had not been reached last night, the chief questions still unsettled were the timing of the new three-power meeting and the subjects it would cover.

The Americans, at least, would like the foreign ministers' discussion to cover China, the Tito-Kremlin quarrel and the economic integration of Western Europe as well as the deepening problems of Germany.

An American official at Lake Success, N. Y., said last night that Germany would be discussed when Soviet Foreign Minister Vishinsky visits Acheson at the State Department on Monday.

Whether or not this visit discloses any break in the present East-West deadlock in Germany, the western foreign ministers will have plenty of German difficulties to discuss among themselves.

Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Great Britain requested the Paris meeting, a British official said last night, because he was increasingly disturbed over the ap-

Civil Rights Group Posts U. S. Bonds

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—The 11 convicted Communist leaders were freed from jail tonight under $260,000 bail.

The United States Court of Appeals ruled early today they were entitled to bail until they can appeal their convictions and prison sentences.

But the Government stubbornly held up their release some 10 hours until it was satisfied all formalities of bail were complied with.

Government prosecutors had fought for $1,000,000 bail, arguing that a lesser amount might tempt the Communist leaders to disappear.

About 100 persons fidgeted for several hours outside the Federal courthouse, awaiting the release of the convicted men. They finally began filing out one by one after darkness had fallen.

3 Jailed in June

Three of the men had been behind bars since last June. They were Gus Hall, Henry Winston and Gilbert Green. Trial Judge Harold R. Medina jailed them for contempt for the duration of the trial.

The other eight defendants joined them in jail after they were convicted October 14 of conspiring to advocate the violent overthrow of the United States Government.

Judge Medina on October 21 sentenced 10 of the defendants to serve five years in prison. He gave the eleventh, Robert Thompson, three years because of his war record. All 11 were ordered to pay $10,000 fines. Judge Medina refused them their freedom on bail.

However, the Appeals Court ruled today they were entitled to their freedom while they are appealing the conviction and sentences.

The appeals judges, Learned Hand, Thomas W. Swan and Jerome N. Frank, said the Government has conceded that the appeal raises a "substantial question."

The question concerns the constitutionality of the Smith Act, the Federal law under which the 11 were tried. It makes it a crime to advocate the violent overthrow of the Government.

The United States Supreme Court will be asked by the defense to rule on whether the act is constitutional and whether it can be applied against leaders of a so-called political party.

The Government said a final decision might not come before next fall.

Truman Opens Fire On 'Reactionaries' Opposing Fair Deal

Rips Standpatters And Communists In Minnesota Centennial Talk

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 3.—President Truman tonight opened a slashing attack on "reactionaries" to the right and left of his "Fair Deal."

In 1948 campaign form, he ripped "standpatters" and Communists alike and predicted a 1950 verdict from the voters "in favor of progress and against reaction."

He said America's course lies between both extremes in "more democracy in this country, not less . . . more personal freedom . . . not less."

Mr. Truman spoke at St. Paul Auditorium following a rousing welcome by the Twin Cities. Police estimated 400,000 persons lined a two-hour, 21-mile parade route wending through Minneapolis to St. Paul. A crowd of 12,000 cheered tonight's speech.

Minnesota Centennial

Minnesota is celebrating the centennial anniversary of its creation as a territory and throngs gathered here from all over the State for "Truman Day" at the fete.

Mr. Truman, too, led off with an historical note. He told the story of the Louisiana Purchase of 1803. Then he swung into his campaign-flavored attack.

The "same kind of people" who opposed westward territorial expansion more than a century ago are now fighting our movement to new social frontiers, he asserted.

Today's "reactionaries," he said, are "tight little groups of selfish men," who favor the "trickle-down theory" of wealth distribution, and leftists who talk "revolution and class welfare."

Retort to 'Statism'

Tonight's veiled reply to Republican charges of "statism" was delivered in a nonpartisan setting. Feuding Minnesota Democratic Farmer-Laborites forgot their differences for the day. The "non-political" festivities continued through a Statewide reception and a $25-a-plate banquet at the Hotel Lowry.

Thanks for 'Grand Day'

He made a brief speech at the reception thanking Minnesotans for a "grand day." He left early, saying he had to go to a meeting to discuss issues before the country "in a nonpolitical way." That even got a laugh out of Republican Gov. Luther W. Youngdahl.

At the dinner which followed, Mr. Truman continued to joke about the 'bipartisan nature" of the celebration. He called Youngdahl "a wonderful sport to come to this bipartisan Democratic meeting."

"We'll eventually make a Democrat out of him," he predicted.

"The only difficulty with which I am faced is that I will have to deliver an address of a bipartisan nature that will be entirely satisfactory to the Democratic Party of Minnesota," he told the dinner guests.

Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle, jr., didn't even bother to jest about it. Boyle called 1950 "the great test" of the Democratic Party and appealed for election of a Congress that will work with the President.

The rambling trip through crowd-lined streets of the two cities began at the Great Northern station in Minneapolis. There Mayor Eric C. Hoyer presented

Kemper, GOP Treasurer, Quits; Hits Finance, Foreign Policies

Chicago, Nov. 3 (AP).—James S. Kemper, wealthy Chicago insurance man, today quit as treasurer of the Republican National Committee with a blast against party finance policy and the bipartisan foreign policy.

He said he resigned because the GOP's reserve fund has dwindled from $832,000 early in 1948 to only $90,000 now. It is "a real tragedy," he said, that GOP leadership has not collected more money or cut expenses drastically.

The 62-year-old executive, a Dewey delegate at the 1948 GOP convention, said he found himself handicapped by the bipartisan foreign policy he said the GOP follows "unofficially or officially."

He declared that Republicans have been "asked to shower gifts on British socialism—the younger sister of communism." He suggested indirectly that party contributions are lagging as a result.

Kemper's resignation was not unexpected. He had threatened to quit in August. But his method and his timing surprised some GOP leaders in Washington. It

Sherman Dissolves 'Op 23' Unit, Called Key to Fight by Navy

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, new Chief of Naval Operations, yesterday dissolved "Op 23"—a behind-the-scenes Navy unit which reputedly stage-managed the recent naval attack on Pentagon defense policies.

In what one official described as his first act in office, Sherman announced he had "disbanded" the organization and transferred its personnel and official duties to other offices.

Capt. Arleigh A. (Thirty-one Knot) Burke, Pacific war hero and head of the division, will be assigned duty overseas, probably in Europe, officials said.

"Op 23" officially was the "Organizational Research and Policy Divisions of the Office of Naval Operations" and like other units of the operations office was known by the abbreviation "Op" and its numerical designation.

Air Force officers charged it was a propaganda outfit set up to fight unification, strategic bombing and the B-36. Navy men conceded that it was a research unit which prepared statistical data and arguments for use by top admirals on current subjects. Some of these, of course, found their way to the press and sympathetic Congressmen.

But naval officials denied it did any "cloak and dagger" propaganda job. It largely did spade work rather than top-level "general staff" planning in the recent Capitol Hill battle, they say.

"The division was discontinued because its principal functions have been completed," said Sherman's announcement.

What continuing functions the unit has will be transferred to other divisions in the Office of Naval Operations, he declared and added:

"Active files of the division will be indexed for reference in the Office of Naval Operations and inactive files in the National Archives."

Tedder Wants British-Built Bombers Only

London, Nov. 3 (U.P.)—Britain's air chief, Marshal of the Air Force Lord Tedder, said today he would not trust any other country to build bombers for Britain—not even America.

"I am not prepared to rely even on American skill and technical knowledge to produce the punch without which we are helpless," Tedder told a British Empire Society audience.

"I would not put our future in anyone else's hands—even our best friends."

He criticized Anglo-American theorists who want Britain to concentrate on fighter production and leave the production of bombers to the United States. At the same time he warned against reliance on a "push-button" war.

"Push-button warfare may come in some form or another in the future, but not now and not in the immediate future," he said.

Tedder agreed with American Air Force chiefs that air battle should take precedence over ground and naval warfare in any future combat.

"In war, nothing on the surface of land or sea can operate effectively unless the situation in the air is under control," he said. "The air battle must be won first."

"I have yet to hear of the fighter or ack-ack gun which can deal with a rocket—but the bomber did and can," he said.

Post Survey on Transit Music Hailed by Both Pros and Cons

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Strongly favorable reaction yesterday greeted the plan of The Washington Post to offer the public a ballot on Sunday by which they can vote for or against radio broadcasts in streetcars and buses.

The approval came from those on both sides of the controversy, as well as from those who so far have kept clear of the feudin', fussin' and fightin'.

The ballot will be printed in Sunday's Post. It will consist of two printed boxes. One will say: "Yes, I favor radio broadcasts in the streetcars and buses." The other will say "No, I do not favor radio broadcasts in the streetcars and buses." The two will be printed side by side. The voter can express his opinion by tearing out the statement that fits his view, and sending it to The Washington Post.

For speed in handling the returns, mailed ballots should be addressed to "The Music Ballot, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C." In addition, for those who wish to deliver their votes personally, a ballot box will be set up in the lobby of The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw.

The Washington Post's test of public sentiment on the transit radio issue will be made while the District Public Utilities Commission considers what its decision is to be on the issue, which raised a storm of pros and cons in a four-day hearing.

Several persons who participated in the hearing voiced their interest in the forthcoming ballot.

John O'Dea, official people's counsel before the PUC, whose suggestions that the hearing be held helped pave the way for it, said he thought taking the vote "would be a good idea. I suggested that they hold the hearing to determine public sentiment on the transit radio plan. I would be interested in the results of the balloting as an additional measure of community sentiment."

Harry S. Wender, chairman of the District Recreation Board, commenting as an individual, said "the

Wallaces' New Hybrid Chick Perils Crop-Support Program

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Wallace family of Iowa, of which former Vice President Henry A. Wallace is the most prominent member, apparently has hit another agricultural jackpot.

It is a hybrid chicken. It threatens to increase egg yields by 20 to 50 percent in a country already burdened with an expensive egg surplus. It may revolutionize the poultry business as much as the Wallace-developed hybrid corn revolutionized corn growing in the past 20 years.

It reportedly is proving highly profitable to the Wallace family and its associates, already enjoying tremendous profits from its corn operations.

Pioneered in Seed Corn

The new Wallace venture is threatening widespread upsets in the Nation's economy:

1. It promises to cut the cost of producing "white meat"—poultry as differentiated from livestock—as much as 50 percent.

2. It promises to upset the almost-sacred theory of price supports for farm products by a radical change in production costs.

3. It promises to increase in a few years the production of eggs, without a material increase in cost, by from 25 to 50 percent. That would make the Government's formula of price supports as old-fashioned as a muzzle-loading shotgun.

About 24 years ago, after the Wallaces had suffered severe financial reverses in the publishing business, Henry A. pioneered in the commercial development of hybrid seed corn—inbred strains that have increased the per acre yield of corn from a quarter to a half and in many cases as much as 50 bushels an acre.

This became the Pioneer Hybrid Corn Co., one of the most successful and profitable ventures in the farm field in generations.

The Pioneer company now has come up with a hybrid chicken that promises to do in that field what hybrid corn did to America's most important field crop. It is called Hy-Line Poultry. It is put out by the Hy-Line Poultry Farms, a subsidiary of the Wallace-controlled Pioneer company.

Poultry experts see in the new development a vastly increased egg crop. Some predict this venture may be so productive as to force an entire review of the whole farm-price program.

Support of egg prices last year cost the Government 67 million dollars. If egg production is increased 25 percent or more—such as hybrid seed increased corn yields—it may make the entire price-support theory look foolish. The price-support cost of surplus increases much faster than the size of the surplus.

Henry B. Wallace, son of Henry A., and manager of the poultry venture, took the family's hair down on the new development this week.

225-250 Eggs Per Hen

The Wallaces, spurred by Henry A., have been experimenting with hybrid chickens and developing the present breeding stock since 1942.

Next year they plan to go to town. Wallace estimated that 24 million of the new Hy-Line chicks

Loyalty Oath Before Premier Required of Czech Bishops

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Nov. 3 (U.P.)—The government disclosed tonight that Archbishop Josef Beran and his bishops will have to take an oath of loyalty to the Communist regime in the presence of Premier Antonin Zapotocky.

The decree published in the official gazette came three days after the state took control over church life in Czechoslovakia and put all priests on the public payroll.

The decree said all archbishops, bishops and apostolic administrators will give their oaths to the premier. They have been classified as "grade four clergy" by the church law.

The rest of the clergy has been divided into three other grades. Grade three, including auxiliary bishops, abbots and heads of orders will take the oath from Alexei Cepicka, head of the new state office for church affairs.

Grade two, including heads of seminaries, consistory chancellors, seminary faculty and canons will give the oath to the chairman of Czechoslovakia's 19 regional national committees. Grade one, the ordinary priests, will go before the chairmen of the district national committees, Czechoslovakia's local government bodies.

The decree said the clergy, from Archbishop Beran down, would be expected to take the following oath:

"I promise on my honor and conscience that I will be faithful to the Czechoslovak Republic and its people's democratic order and that I will not do anything which would be against its interests, security or integrity. I will, as a citizen of the people's democratic state, fulfill honestly the duties which result from my position and I will try with all my powers to support the building (constructive) efforts aimed at the welfare of the people."

The bishops have told priests to take the oath but with this qualification, either orally or in writing:

"Since I am convinced that the government would never ask anything which would be contrary to the laws of God or human rights."

The bishops reiterated that they would not take the oath or accept state salaries.

Writing 'Wright' In Right Place Sets Court Aright

Newport News, Va., Nov. 3 (AP). Attorneys in a case involving payment of insurance policies in Federal District Court agreed today that data compiled by the plaintiff's bookkeeper was admissible evidence.

It developed, however, that at one place in the compilation, the name of the plaintiff, Wilson H. Wright, had been omitted.

So counsel for Wright addressed the bookkeeper on the stand:

School Equalities Urged in Virginia

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Nov. 3.—The Virginia Education Association today called for the State to end "educational inequality" within the Old Dominion and urged Federal aid to help along the program.

Delegates to the association's forty-third annual convention recommended a State plan of action to guarantee "a minimum standard of education for all children."

The association, which represents the State's more than 20,000 teachers, also declared itself as favoring the principle of "Federal aid without Federal control."

The teachers, who took the action at a morning session of the delegate assembly, tonight heard Gov. William M. Tuck

While not revealing details of the budget that he will recommend for the next biennium, Tuck assured the teachers that it will contain an increase in funds for the public school system comparable to that granted in recent years.

Appropriations available for schools have increased from $69,906,502 in the period 1942-46 to $122,397,699 in 1946-50, he said.

Tuck told the convention, attended by more than 3000 teachers, that the new budget will provide for "a more adequate retirement system" and "a very large capital outlay appropriation for the public school building program."

In expressing views on Federal aid, the teachers adopted a report of the legislative committee which declared that Federal assistance particularly is needed in States where there is segregation "to more nearly equalize facilities."

On educational inequality the teachers said, "We deplore the degree of inequality of buildings, equipment, offerings, qualifications of teachers and the amount invested per child."

For State action they recommended:

A State-wide minimum salary schedule. The association affirmed a previous stand that this scale should be $2000 for the professionally trained teacher with a degree. Annual raises of $100 would bring the minimum to $3200 after 12 years.

State funds for school buildings granted in relation to the communities' ability and effort to provide facilities.

State-wide standards of teacher certification, employment practices and school accreditation with minimum standards set for equipment in science, library and physical education courses.

The teachers declared themselves "wholeheartedly" in support of the school program of Democratic gubernatorial nominee John S. Battle.

They indorsed his proposal that the State make available 119 million dollars in funds during the next four years for the construction of school buildings. Of this amount 75 million dollars would be in outright grants and 44 million dollars on a loan basis.

The teachers declared that when the money is available it should be for "permanent and durable" construction that will serve for 50 years or more and not for temporary" or "emergency" buildings.

They forecast that the buildings will be needed in the decades 1960-80 when the present war babies have families.

Delegates indorsed, but without enthusiasm, action of the State Board of Education in asking for $5,500,000 in 1950-51 to raise teacher salaries. They said it was "regrettable" that the board had not asked for $11,500,000, the amount estimated as needed to set up the $2000 to $3200 minimum salary scale.

The teachers said they were indorsing the board's request for the smaller sum with the "understanding" that additional funds will be made available the following year.

Appearing on the program tonight with Governor Tuck were W. A. Early, president of the association and Superintendent of Arlington Schools, and Dowell J. Howard, acting State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Tomorrow the teachers will split up into 21 sections to discuss curriculum. The delegate assembly will hold its final session tomorrow night when it will adopt resolutions and hear a talk by Dr. Andrew D. Holt, president of the National Education Association.

NEA Blasts Firing of Fla. School Head

By the United Press

The National Education Association's Committee on Academic Freedom yesterday denounced the firing of Mitchell Ferguson as supervising principal of Sebring (Fla.) schools as a "direct violation of sound professional practices."

Ferguson had been principal for 13 years when the Highlands County (Florida) school trustees decided February 1, 1949, against keeping him for the 1949-50 school term.

The association's committee on tenure and academic freedom filed a preliminary report last night protesting that he was fired without being given specific reasons, prior notice, or a hearing.

An investigating committee reported that the only reasons they got were that Ferguson spent too much time on interests outside his school job, failed to cooperate with some parents and "has out lived his usefulness in the Sebring school."

In contrast, the investigating committee said it also received testimony that Ferguson was an asset to Sebring because of his active interests in community movements, was a strict but fair disciplinarian, and had improved as a principal each year he was on the job.

Schoolroom Need Stressed In Maryland

Baltimore, Nov. 3 (AP).—Many county delegates to the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers Convention in progress here said today that the greatest need of the public school system is more schools.

The twenty-fourth annual convention opened today, and will conclude Saturday.

Most of the first-day session was taken up by committee reports, reports of officers and a speech of greeting by Dr. William H. Lemmel, superintendent of Baltimore city's schools.

It was stated on the convention floor that 4000 new classrooms are needed in the counties to meet immediate needs for space.

First Sergt. W. W. Corbin of the Maryland State Police discussed the situation at length with reporters. He is president of the congress' Frederick County council.

Sergeant Corbin asserted there are two schools in Brunswick that are still in use although they "have been condemned for years."

He said: "We need an agricultural-vocational school. There is no place for children to work on such problems as agriculture and crafts. They get the theory but there is nothing practical. Industry and business in Frederick City and other of the larger towns in the county are calling urgently for young persons trained in such a school.

"Frankly, the 4-H clubs are teaching the boys and girls more than is taught in county schools in this respect."

Management Group Honors Ching, Hoover

New York City, Nov. 3 (Spl.).—Cyrus S. Ching, director, Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, tonight received the Human Relations Award of the Society for the Advancement of Management as "an industrialist pioneer and statesman in human relations." Herbert Hoover received the Frederick W. Taylor Award for "outstanding contribution to the Advancement of Art and Science of Management."

Washington delegates to the annual SAM conference, meeting here, include: R. R. Zimmerman, vice president, Trundle Engineering Co., former national president of SAM and present national director in charge of human relations; Harvey Becknell, chief, Office of Management Planning and Review, Labor Department, and national SAM director for Government; Howard Hyde, member SAM national executive committee; Paul Douglass, president, American University; Mary Cushing Niles, assistant to the chairman, Federal Personnel Council; Ivan Asay, chief, General Methods Staff, Public Health Service, Federal Security Agency, and others.

Paul Porter Quits Palestine Commission

Paul Porter, Washington attorney and former Price Administrator, yesterday said he has resigned as United States member of the Palestine Conciliation Commission, which has headquarters in Switzerland.

He resigned because of the need to return to his private professional affairs, he said.

4 Migrant Babies Die of Starvation

Hanford, Calif., Nov. 3 (U.P.).—The starvation deaths of four babies among "Grapes of Wrath" migrant farm families in the San Joaquin Valley brought a threat from authorities today to bring criminal charges against parents found guilty of negligence.

The deaths were discovered in an instigation of "intolerable conditions of misery" among the cotton pickers and farm workers who camp in old automobiles, tents and shacks along the highway.

Officials said there were 150,000 migrants from the Midwest now harvesting crops in the rich valley.

"These people are working and getting paid," one official said. "I don't know what they do with their money.'

Health Officer Dr. Donald Upp said the problem of malnutrition "is spread over the entire valley.' He said the county has an ordinance requiring all labor camps to have health permits but that it has not been enforced.

"Conditions at the camps are shocking in their lack of proper sanitation, shelter and heating facilities," he said.

College Keeps Its Honor

By Hodding Carter
Pulitzer Prize-Winning Mississippi Editor

Greenville, Miss., Nov. 2.—With the eyes of the Nation upon her, Jefferson Military College has refused to be put in a gilded cage. Faced with a proposition that she keep her honor or teach racial superiority in return for a 50-million-dollar gift from 83-year-old Judge George W. Armstrong, the little Mississippi school chose to keep her pride.

As a result, the poor but honest 147-year-old school in little (population 500) Washington, Miss., may come to an end this spring. A gift of $5000 from Julius Klein, Houston ice cream manufacturer, meets the present note at the bank. But the ragged little school with its student body of 48 may have to close in June if efforts of a newly organized endowment committee headed by Vice Admiral Aaron Stanton (Tip) Merrill (retired) of Natchez are unsuccessful.

The proposition to the school was made last February when the Texas oil and steel millionaire offered the school five sixths of his estate. The conditions he named were that the board be reduced from 12 to 5 men—he to name three—and that the charter of the school be amended. This amendment was to provide that the school be primarily for white Christians and that no person of African or Asiatic decent be admitted as student or faculty members.

Last week it looked as if the school had accepted the offer. Judge Armstrong's son, Allen J. Armstrong, one of his three appointees to the new board which was to consummate the deal on November 26, announced that the school had accepted the offer and would henceforth teach the "supremacy of the Anglo-Saxon and Latin-American races."

It was this public announcement that made the 12 trustees examine more closely the fabulous gift which was to have put the poverty-stricken school on easy street.

Although his home is at Woodstock plantation, 16 miles from Natchez and near the school, Judge Armstrong is actually a native and legal resident of Texas. The title, "judge," affixed to his name dates to 1897, when he was a county judge. A lawyer, he has headed banks and power companies in Fort Worth. After being declared bankrupt in 1923, he was shortly able to place 2½ million dollars worth of stock on the exchange and his Texas steel companies won the Army and Navy award during the war. In addition, there are oil wells on his 42,000 Mississippi acres.

On Saturday, when the school turned down his proposition, which would have made it second only to the University of Texas in wealth in the South, Judge Armstrong announced that he would give his endowment to his Judge Armstrong Foundation at Fort Worth. This foundation publishes the judge's pamphlets against communism, Jews and Negroes. The pamphlets are distributed by the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith's organization of St. Louis.

There has been no comment from Gen. George Van Horn Moseley (retired), critic of the New Deal, Jews and immigration policies, who was to have been one of Judge Armstrong's representatives on the board. His third appointee, Joseph E. Brown, sided with the college's two in requesting clarification of his intentions for the school.

Jefferson, a college in name only, has a faculty of seven, two of whom are teachers' wives who serve without pay. The classes taught range from the first through the twelfth grade.

Through its proud portals, Jefferson Davis entered as a student when he was 10 years old. Here John James Audubon taught, and here the Marquis de Lafayette, then General Lafayette, reviewed the schools cadets.

Now from the ceilings the plaster is falling. The superintendent, young Maj. Henry Rider, tends the grounds. The glory of the past and the glitter of the future both are gone. But as S. N. Murphy, chairman of the executive board, remarked last week: "We feel that we can at least keep the pride we've had for 147 years."

MP Says British Health Plan Not Forced on People

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 3 (AP).—England's socialized medical aid program is essential to the Nation's welfare, and is not forced on its people, a Labor member of Parliament said today.

Arthur Massey Skeffington of London declared many speakers have given a false impression of the British plan in America.

"They try to give the impression that people are forced into participating in the government medical aid program," Skeffington said.

"That is wholly incorrect. No British doctor is forced to join the program; no patient is forced to take advantage of the service. Under the British plan, you choose your own doctor just as anywhere else.

"What the plan does mean is that ability to pay no longer puts you at the head of the line for medical treatment. The oldest and poorest old-age pensioner in my district can have the finest treatment in the land if she requires it."

Protruding Venus . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ABOVE THE SIDEWALKS OF NEW YORK—Because Venus goddess of bloom and beauty, blooms too far over the sidewalk in this work of art, owners of Parke-Bernet Art Galleries will have to pay $25 a year rental for the space to the city. She and her buddy ornament the front of the firm's new million dollar building in Manhattan

Vishinsky Visit Here Labeled Courtesy Call

Lake Success, Nov. 3 (AP).—Soviet officials here today continued to minimize the importance of Vishinsky's visit to Washington. A Soviet spokesman insisted that as far as he knew, Vishinsky was merely paying a courtesy call.

Chesty Venus Must Pay Tax In New York

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—New York's newest work of art—a whopping great aluminum Venus, buxom as you could imagine and as nude as your nose—drew varied reactions from Madison ave. strollers today.

But the city government was for it. The 900-pound figure, ornamenting the front of the new one million dollar Parkebernet Art Galleries, brings the taxpayers a tidy $25 a year.

This is because the lady's chest juts 18 inches farther over the sidewalk than the building code allows.

Nobody discovered this until sculptor Wheeler Williams had completed her. Then there was much head scratching.

Could Venus'—ah—lines be altered?

Certainly not, said Williams. It would spoil the effect. He said the effect was "Venus awakening the sleeping giant of Manhattan to the beauty of art and culture."

But it was found that if Venus couldn't occupy the extra 18 inches free, she could rent them. So the lady is free to jut—as long as her sponsors pay a $25 annual fee.

Woman Beaten In Home Here By Stranger

Mrs. Rosalie Richards, 623 B st. ne., was in good condition at Gallinger Hospital yesterday, recovering from effects of a beating she said was inflicted Wednesday afternoon by a stranger who came to her home.

She said she answered a knock on the door at 2 p. m., and the man asked for a room. When she refused him, she said, he slugged her, knocking her unconscious in the hallway. She said she knew nothing else until her son, William Richards, discovered her semiconscious in her bedroom at midnight, 10 hours after the attack.

To Get Bubble Gum in Color

New York, Nov. 3. (U.P.)—Dr. Morris Nafash promised the kids today they are going to get a multicolor bubble gum.

Nafash, a chemical engineer, has been working on formulas for bringing color to the bubbles blown from the mouths of babes. Now his goal is in sight.

At 50, he can blow bubbles 15 inches in diameter, bubbles within bubbles and bubbles shaped like a 5-cent cigar. But he won't be happy until he can see a beautiful bubble in every color of the rainbow under his nose.

"I'm hoping I can perfect a way to make pictures on bubbles, too," he said. "But I'm worrying about one thing at time, right now."

Nafash feels he's already contributed much to the advancement of the 40 million dollar-a-year (at 1 cent a chew) bubble-gum industry.

By using synthetic rubber instead of chicle, he's increased bubble expansion from 3 inches to more than a foot. And he thoughtfully added a substance that keeps exploded bubbles from sticking to the face, chin, hair and shirt collar of strong-winded children.

For some strange reason, grown-ups are sneaking a chaw of bubble-gum now and then, he said. It's good for the jaw, a lot of fun, and not nearly as messy as a plug of tobacco, he said.

"A lot of business executives chew it because it doesn't stick to their false plates," Nafash added.

Soviets Claim Secrets Of Cosmic Rays, A-Nucleus

Moscow, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Sergei Vavilov, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, today said Soviet physicists already have determined the true nature of cosmic rays and learned hitherto unknown properties of the atom's nucleus.

Vavilov made his observations in Izvestia in an article on scientific progress during the past year.

Central Alumni Back Dr. Corning's Stand

The board of directors of the Central High School Alumni Association last night unanimously indorsed School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning's recent recommendation against use of Central High School for Negro students.

In a 20-page report, Dr. Corning had told the Board of Education Wednesday that the transfer of Cardozo High School students to Central, proposed to relieve overcrowding at the Negro school, would not be "educationally sound."

Instead, the Superintendent recommended using Central for a postgraduate technical training program for white students.

The Central Alumni directors read the report aloud and went over it, paragraph by paragraph, before taking action. The executive board was to draft a letter to the Education Board to express approval.

12-Month Year Urged For Schools

A proposal to make a 12-month school year, with each pupil taking a three-month vacation, but on a rotation basis, was taken under consideration last night by the Prince Georges County Civic Federation.

A resolution advocating the proposal was introduced by Walter S. Mulligan, president of the group. A special committee headed by S. G. Mistretta, of Oxon Hill, was appointed to study it and report at the December meeting.

Mulligan presented a letter from the county board of education which said the county is now 270 classrooms short of adequate school facilites. It said that with an expected 2500 increase in enrollment next September, the shortage will rise to 308 classrooms. The 12,-month school year, with rotation of vacations, would help to solve the shortage, the Mulligan resolution asserted. It calls on Prince Georges members of the Maryland General Assembly to obtain emergency legislation for the change.

The Federation representatives met at the County Service building at Hyattsville, which suddenly filled with smoke during their session. The Bladensburg, Brentwood, and Hyattsville fire companies responded to extinguish a blaze, which was found to a small, smoldering one in the waste bin in the welfare room. Though some Federation members went out temporarily, the meeting was not formally recessed or interrupted.

Wife Plots To Murder Lovin' Hubby

Port Orchard, Wash., Nov. 3 (U.P.). A petite 31-year-old Bremerton, Wash., mother hired two men to murder her husband because "he wanted to make love every night" of their 15-year-old marriage, she told Kitsap County Prosecuting Attorney James Munro today.

The murder never was carried out.

Mrs. Margaret Susan Piatt was charged with attempted murder and held in lieu of $7500 bail after confessing to Munro. She said her accomplices "welched" after she paid them more than $1500.

Hubby Lends a Hand

Hollis D. Scott, 23, a former private detective, and Wallace Nottern, 22, both of Bremerton, were charged with embezzlement and held under $3500 bond each. Both admitted discussing the plot with Mrs. Piatt, but declared they had no intention of carrying it out.

The husband, Wilford Piatt, 34, meanwhile, said he still loved his wife and hired an attorney to defend her. The couple embraced fondly in jail today.

Shortly after the reunion, Mrs. Piatt said, "I guess it wasn't a very good idea . . . it didn't work." Then she said she would like to go back to him, after all.

The red-haired, blue-eyed young mother of two readily admitted she decided on murder as "the only way to get rid" of her husband, Munro said.

"Couldn't Stand It"

'Every night since we were married 15 years ago he has wanted to make love," she said. 'I' couldn't stand it. I tried to run away a year ago to my relatives in Stockton, Calif., but he forced me to return."

Stopping on 'Side' Of Highway in Fog Piles Up 17 Autos

Peabody, Mass., Nov. 3 (U.P.).—When fog and smoke from the town dump drifted over Route 128 today, a motorist decided to pull over to the side rather than drive in zero visibility.

Actually, however, he parked in the middle of a four-lane highway and 17 following cars piled into him and each other.

No one was injured, but 12 automobiles involved had to be hauled away. It took two hours to clear the road.

Shaw's Play 'Flops'; To Close on Nov. 12

London, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—George Bernard Shaw's latest play, "Buoyant Billions," has flopped financially and will close November 12 after a run of five weeks, a theater official said today.

Shaw, 93, had described the play, which he wrote two years ago, as the best play he could do in his "dotage."

Yeggmen Get $646 From 6-Foot Safe

The safe was in the office of McNulty Bros. Construction Co., 616 Rhode Island ave. ne. Company officials said the safe weighs at least a ton. The burglars entered through a side window.

American, Japanese Given Nobel Prizes

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 3 (AP). Two scientists—a Japanese and an American—were awarded Nobel Prizes today.

Dr. Hideki Yukawa, the first Japanese ever to be given a Nobel Prize, received the physics award for contributions to atomic physics. Yukawa, 42, has been a professor of theoretical physics at Columbia University, New York, since last September. He was educated entirely in Japan.

Dr. William Francis Giauque, 54, professor of thermo dynamics at the University of California, was awarded the chemistry prize for his studies in the behavior of matter in temperatures close to absolute zero. The world's foremost expert on cold, Giauque developed methods to create lower temperatures than any scientist had ever attained.

Each award is about $30,000.

The Swedish Academy decided to shelve the 1949 Nobel Prize for Literature, because it was deadlocked over the top candidates, including Winston Churchill and Italian philosopher Benedetto Croce. Thirty-five persons had been nominated.

Both Giauque and Yukawa are so-called pure scientists, interested in learning the secrets of nature, leaving the practical application of discoveries to others.

The academy's deliberations are in secret. Churchill's candidacy presumably was based largely on his two books of World War II memoirs. Croce, 83, is the author of many works on philosophy, esthetics and history.

The others were not identified, but outside observers had considered the American novelist, William Falkner, and Carl Sandburg, poet and biographer of Lincoln, to be possibilities.

Nobel Prizes Go to Them

Dr. Giauque Dr. Yukawa
Winners of Nobel prizes in chemistry and physics, respectively

Yukawa in college was a mathematical physicist, the two words denoting a combination of the two most difficult kinds of scientific thinking, and second baseman on the Kyoto baseball team.

He received the Nobel Physics Award for his theory on the meson as the binding force keeping the atomic nucleus together in spite of tremendous forces striving to split it.

The meson, since established as a known elementary particle, had been predicted by Yukawa at 28.

Yukawa's mathematics predicted that a queer particle, much heavier than an electron, probably existed. Later it turned out this prediction was right. The meson is the closest science yet has come to understanding its greatest mystery, the source of the tremendous energy in atoms.

"I started thinking about mesons—only they were not mesons or anything else—in 1933," he said recently. "The beginning was consideration of Enrico Fermi's theory, that led to an idea about the existence of an unknown particle.

"It took between one and two years to write the mathematical forms. These were published in the Japanese Journal of Physics in 1935."

A highly elusive subatomic particle, the meson is believed to act like putty in the atomic nucleus by wandering incessantly between protons and neutrons, changing both into their opposites in the process.

No less than seven different forms of mesons now are known, whereas Yukawa postulated the existence of only one. One of the seven, however, corresponds to the picture arrived at by Yukawa by mathematical methods.

In the world of research, Giauque is noted for investigations of the nature of matter when it is reduced to a temperature approaching absolute zero—459.6 degrees below zero on the Fahrenheit scale.

He has perfected a method for reducing the temperature of small amounts of matter to a few thousandths of a degree above absolute zero. Strange things happen to matter subjected to such treatment.

Helium, a gas at normal temperatures, is a liquid when near absolute zero, but in some respects it behaves like neither a liquid nor a solid. It will climb the walls of test tubes, ignoring gravitation. It will transmit heat waves and defy magnetism.

At such low temperatures molecules and atoms are supposed to be lined up in perfect rows and figures, while they bulge or sway in normal temperatures. One of the practical results of Giauque's hunt for disorder in these rows was his discovery of three kinds of oxygen. There should have been only one.

The discovery of these oxygen isotopes with different atomic weights started a world-wide search for isotopes of other light elements, sush as hydrogen, nitrogen and carbon.

It led Dr. Harold Urey, New York scientist, to the discovery of hydrogen isotopes—called heavy water. Besides being useful for the production of atomic energy, this discovery won Urey the Nobel Prize for Chemistry in 1934.

The nearest scientists have come to a practical use for extreme cold is in the measurement of a property of matter called entropy.

Here Giauque made startling discoveries of disorder in matter at close to absolute zero, where under the laws of thermo dynamics unruly matter should be at complete rest.

Giauque charted the entropy of a large number of substances. A glance at this list tells a chemist whether certain reactions can take place. Some day a much larger list may speed chemical progress in laboratories and in industry.

Giauque, a native of Niagara Falls, Ont., is 6 feet 1 inch tall. Despite an impression of slenderness he weighs 200 pounds and has the stamina to work 12 hours a day.

Meson Seen As Magic Key

New York, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Prof. Hideki Yukawa today said man may learn the history of the universe after he unlocks the "very heart" of the atom.

One of the keys, he believes, may be the meson.

"We don't know exactly what happens in the very heart of the nucleus of the atom," he said. "We are more certain—more definite — about the nuclear forces at greater distance, but as to forces at very short distances, there may be still other particles or forces unknown to us."

Tests Hint Choline in Whisky Might Prevent Liver Ills

London, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—The scientist who discovered insulin suggested today that the addition of certain food substances to whisky and other alcoholic beverages may prevent cirrhosis of the liver.

The suggestion was contained in a report on recent experiments with rats by Dr. C. H. Best and other scientists.

They fed one group of white rats on alcohol instead of drinking water for six months and another group on sugar of the same food value as alcohol.

Both groups lost their appetite for foods containing choline, which normally control liver fat and protect the liver from cirrhosis.

"The dietary faddist, alcoholic or soft drink addict does not consume a normal diet," the report said. "One possibility, therefore, is to add choline (contained particularly in meat) to alcoholic or sweet beverages."

Attlee Blasts Soviet Obstruction in U.N.

London, Nov. 3. (U.P.) — Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee accused Russia tonight of constant, deliberate obstruction in the United Nations and warned that this was still a dangerous world in which the "forces of destruction" might get beyond control.

Speaking at a rally of the United Nations Association, Attlee accused Russia of continually using its U. N. veto power "as an instrument of power politics and for furthering the imperialist aims of the (Soviet) government."

"The fact is," he said, "despite all their professions, that group of powers in eastern Europe who obey the orders of the Kremlin are undemocratic.

"Their philosophy comprises the belief in the right to rule of an artistrocracy of ideology. They believe in force. They are totally unacquainted with the methods of democracy which obtain in States which have a long experience of civilization."

Attlee defended the Atlantic Pact and the Western European Union as both legal and necessary.

"In view of the frustration caused by Communist in transigeance at the U. N., we have taken the lead in establishing, in consonance with its principles, organizations on a more limited basis for the purpose of collective securty.

officers and 17 enlisted men under his direction. The division was set up last December 23, but actually grew out of the old "Secretary's Committee of Research on Reorganization," known as "Scorer."

"Scorer" was set up by the then Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal just after the war to promote the Navy's views in the battle then ranging over unification.

Sherman's action was viewed as notice that organized Navy opposition to the Pentagon unification program must be stopped. He is declared to be equally determined that there will be no widespread shakeup in the Navy.

Meanwhile Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the powerful Senate Armed Services Committee, came out in support of Pentagon chiefs in their row with the admirals.

Tydings, who was in Europe while the controversy raged on Capitol Hill, told reporters that more defense dollars should go to build up the Army and Air Force rather than the Navy.

"Our Navy is three times the size of the combined navies of the world," he declared. "Our Army with only a few divisions is pitifully below the comparable strength of the 'other great country'."

The Marylander declared, however, that we must keep "the best Navy in the world," and emphasized that naval aviation must be maintained "strong and in the front rank."

In another development yesterday, Capt. John G. Crommelin, the veteran Navy flier who blew the top off the interservice row by disclosing "confidential" Navy letters criticizing Pentagon policies, submitted a formal reply to charges he broke the law in doing so.

The Navy did not make public Crommelin's reply, but it was understood to parallel what he has said publicly. That is that the "confidential" classification on the letters was "political" in nature and no military secrets were disclosed. The Navy must now decide what further action to take in his case. A court-martial is expected.

Announcement was made of the assignment of Rear Admiral John J. Ballentine to take over Admiral Sherman's old post as commander of the Sixth Task Fleet in the Mediterranean, as disclosed by this newspaper yesterday.

Ballentine, a flier and classmate of Sherman, will fly to London this weekend to confer with Admiral Richard L. Conolly, commander, American naval forces in Europe, before joining his flagship.

King and Queen of Greece Congratulate Sherman

The King and Queen of Greece were among the first to send congratulations to Adm. Forrest P. Sherman upon his appointment as Chief of Naval Operations.

Sherman had invited the couple to a luncheon party aboard the cruiser Des Moines in Greece's Thaleron Bay, then had been summoned to Washington.

Their message sent from the ship and signed "Paul" and "Frederika," said: "We send you our heartiest congratulations and regret not having seen you today. Hope to have the opportunity some day in the near future. Good luck."

Saar Asks to Join Council of Europe

Paris, Nov. 3 (NYHT).—A request by the Saar Territory for admission to the Council of Europe was presented today to the council's 12-member committee of ministers by French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

The committee is expected to take up Friday the question of inviting western Germany and Austria, as well as the Saar, to join the council, which was formed to promote the unity of Europe.

(The council, a bicameral institution, was formed to seek co-operation in economic, social and cultural matters. Most of its power is given to the committee of ministers, comprising the foreign ministers' of the member states; the consultative assembly has advisory powers. Partisans of the council see its ultimate objective as a democratic "United States of Europe.")

Neither the Bonn government nor Austria has made formal request for admission, but their membership has been encouraged. France has said it will agree to the admission of Germany only if the Saar is also admitted. This would constitute recognition by the European countries that the Saar is to be detached from Germany. It has been incorporated into the French economy, but its political status has not been defined by any treaty.

The committee of ministers also took up today the report of the consultative assembly, which met earlier this year. The committee asserted its power over the assembly for amendments to the council statute. These amendments would have lodged greater power in the assembly, in which there is greater pressure for making decisive action now to unite Europe.

The ministers' action was a clear victory for British Foreign Ernest Bevin, who favors "cooperation" rather than political and economic union between the European countries. As long as the committee of ministers is all-powerful in the council, and each country retains a veto in the committee, the council is unlikely to be able to move far toward a European union.

West German Economy Talks Set

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 3 (U.P.). Negotiations toward making the West German government a full and independent participant in the European recovery program will open here Friday, it was disclosed today.

ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman arrived by plane from Paris and brought the draft of a bilateral treaty between the United States and West Germany. A West German government delegation will come here to discuss it with American ECA officials.

Hoffman "especially commended" Western Germany for pointing the way to European unification by liberalizing trade treaties with other countries.

West Germans to Keep Government in Bonn

Bonn, Nov. 4 (NYHT).—Western Germany's long debate for the location of its capital at last was ended tonight when the Bunderstag of the Federal Republic voted 200 to 176 to keep the government in Bonn instead of moving to Frankfurt.

West Powers Plan Meeting

parent lack of coordination among the western Allies in Germany.

The British were annoyed last month at public statements by John J. McCloy, the American High Commissioner, expressing the "personal" view that the dismantling of German plants ought to be stopped. But the friction with McCloy has ended for the moment, and was not the reason why Bevin wanted Acheson to hurry to Europe.

Bevin's real worry, it was stated here, was the evidence that the new West German government was playing the three Western allies off against one another. The British feel it is high time for the three allies, acting together at the highest Cabinet level, to deal with the new Western German government at Bonn, and to bring it into the Council of Europe and the 18-nation Organization for European Economic Cooperation.

Although it was the British who made the request to Acheson, the French are the ones who most urgently wanted a Foreign Ministers' meeting on Germany.

French Have Four Reasons

The French wanted a meeting for at least four reasons.

The first was their fear that the recent 23½ percent devaluation of the German mark might flood France and the rest of western Europe with German goods. The French devalued their own currency by only 10 percent. As a partial offset to the cheapening of the German currency, the French have been trying—so far without success—to get an agreement whereby German coal would be sold in France at no higher prices than those charged to German consumers.

Their second reason was the revived agitation in western Germany and in the United States to stop all further dismantling of German plants as reparations to Germany's neighbors.

The third French reason for wanting a meeting now is what they regard as the passive and non-cooperative attitude of the new West German government to the international authority that controls the distribution of products from the Ruhr. So far, the new West German republic has sent only "observers" to the headquarters of the Ruhr Authority, although western Germany has pledged itself to join in the work of the new Authority and to abide by its decisions.

The most compelling reason of all, as the French see it, is the need to strengthen their shaky new government by a demonstration of three-power unity toward western Germany.

Shocked and Angry

The French were hurt at being left out of what they regarded as "exclusive" American-British-Canadian economic discussions here in September. They were shocked and angry when the British then devalued the pound without, apparently, giving them advance notice.

The shock was so great that the Queuille government fell, and France was plunged into a three-weeks' cabinet crisis from which it is only now emerging.

Now, as always, French opinion is deeply afraid of a resurgent nationalism in Germany, in spite of recent statements by Chancellor Konrad Adenauer calling for Franco-German friendship.

Pathological Suspicion

Although Acheson reached a close understanding on German policies last Spring with Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, recent events have revived the almost pathological suspicion in France about the American attitude toward Germany. A visit by Acheson at this time may assure the French once more that the United States has no intention of building Germany into a new menace on the French eastern frontier.

In American eyes, the surest way to prevent Germany from becoming a menace is to make the new western German republic a full-fledged member of the Council of Europe and the Organization for European Economic Cooperation. Acheson can be counted on, therefore, to press for the fastest possible integration of western Germany with her western neighbors.

If this is not accomplished soon, the result foreseen here is the swift growth of a vengeful nationalism in western Germany, the discrediting of democratic forces there, and a dangerous attraction toward the Soviet-controlled east German state.

Acheson will be able, too, to reinforce the appeals and warnings of Paul Hoffman, the Economic Cooperation Administrator, about the need of faster economic integration throughout western Europe. He can talk frankly to Bevin, whose government this week rejected Hoffman's plea to make all of western Europe a single trading area.

The British have said they would not oppose regional efforts on the continent to sweep away trade barriers, but their attitude as reported here has been a disappointment in more than one American Government agency.

Acheson spent most of yesterday discussing the agenda of the coming meeting with his advisers. Philip C. Jessup, ambasasdor-at-large, came here from Lake Success, presumably to brief his chief on Monday's meeting with Vishinsky.

U. S. Approves Planes' Sale To Yugoslavia

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Reporter

The United States yesterday cleared the way for Yugoslavia to buy commercial aircraft—and it okayed a sale of aviation gasoline to the rebel Communist nation.

It was one of the day's two steps toward strengthening the Western side of the cold war in Europe.

In the other move, the State Department opened negotiations with eight western European nations on agreements under which they will receive one billion dollars worth of arms to build the defense of the North Atlantic area.

The gasoline sale to Yugoslavia carried with it lubricants. Amounts were not disclosed. Britain is reported going along on easing the ban on sale of commercial-type planes and parts.

No Formal Requests Made

State Department Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said the United States will consider requests for the purchase of airplanes and parts, but that no specific requests have been made formally by the Yugoslav government.

Heretofore, such sales by American companies were forbidden under the general policy of denying war potential goods to Iron Curtain countries.

Regarding a specific purchase of aviation gasoline and lubricants, McDermott said, the Yugoslavs have asked permission to buy these materials. Their request has been screened and approved by the Commerce and State Departments.

Nations Get Arms Terms

The opening of negotiations on the arms agreement marks the beginning of the last step necessary before arms shipments under the program recently voted by Congress actually begin.

Yesterday diplomats of the eight European nations that have requested arms aid received drafts of identical proposed agreements to submit to their home governments.

The eight countries are the Netherlands, Belgium, Norway, Luxembourg, Italy, Britain, Denmark and France.

European Aid Must Be Cut, Senators Say

Berlin, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Members of the United States Senate Appropriations Committee touring Europe said today America must cut its European aid as soon as possible, but that no "price tag" would be placed on peace.

Senator John J. McClellan (D., Ark.) said, "I have already seen some countries where American expenditures can be reduced" because of the rapid recovery resulting from American aid. He declined to name the nations.

"The United States will not put a price tag on peace and if we find our money is being expended wisely we are prepared to make further sacrifices," Senator Edward J. Thye (R., Minn.) said.

Committee members said they had seen no evidence of American aid money being wasted.

The group, headed by Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), also included Senators Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.); Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.); John C. Stennis (D., Miss.), and Willis Robertson (D., Va.).

The group has visited Belgium, Holland, Scandinavia and western Germany. It also will go to Luxembourg, Switzerland, Austria, Greece, Italy, Spain, France and England.

Latin Nations Agree To Somaliland Plan

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Hopes for settling the future of Italy's prewar empire at the current session of the United Nations General Assembly were revived today when the powerful Latin-American bloc agreed on a compromise formula.

A caucus of the 20-member Latin group accepted in principle an Argentine plan for triple administration of Somaliland under Italy, Egypt and a South American country, probably Brazil.

The current majority blueprint calls for independence for a unified Libya by 1952 and postponement of a solution on Eritrea until the next assembly.

The proposals on Libya and Eritrea were approved earlier by the main political committee.

The whole revised plan will be taken up again by the committee as soon as it finishes debate on the Greek question.

Other N. N. developments'

1. The economic and financial committee approved, over Soviet bloc opposition, an Australian proposal that a high level of international investment, chiefly in underdeveloped areas, would help realize the objective of full employment.

2. France put before the social committee a resolution to adopt Secretary General Trygve Lie's plan for a U. N. high commissioner on refugees.

3. The main political committee gave unanimous approval to a Western proposal requesting the Red Cross to assist in the early repatriation of Greek children now being cared for in Communist countries bordering Greece. After this rare East-West agreement, the committee fell back into its familiar wrangling over Soviet and Western resolutions on the main issue of the Greek dispute. The prolonged debate delayed a vote until Friday.

Wave of Sabotage

Killings Hit Red Regime In Albania

Belgrade, Nov. 3 (NYHT.).—Maj. Gen. Mehmet Shehu, No. 2 Albanian Communist, has revealed in Tirana that the Albanian regime was plagued during the past year by a wave of sabotage and murder.

In a report to the Albanian Communist Party in October, which has just come to light here, he declared the situation has been brought under control.

Shehu, Minister of Interior, told of the following acts of subversion:

1. Sabotage "on a wide scale" in the railway network; 2. "Diversionary" acts in the Krabi coal mines (in northern Albania); 3. The organization of flights from the country; 4. The murder of Communist Party secretaries and secret police agents in several localities.

Nehru Hits Questions On Cold War Stand

Vancouver, British Columbia, Nov. 3 (AP).—India's Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru lashed out last night at those who ask which side he favors in the cold war.

"It seems to me these are very crude questions and very naive questions," Nehru declared in a speech. And again he told the world he does not intend to "tie" his newly freed nation to any bloc in international power politics.

'Policeman of the Month' Cited . . .

The Washington Post

CHIEF DECORATES PRIVATE—Pvt. Norman S. Jones (center), named "Policeman of the Month," is decorated by Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police. Presentation of the medal is witnessed by Michael Lane (right), president of the Capitol Hill Lions Club, at the club's luncheon yesterday. Jones was cited for his work which led to the capture of a man who raped a 4-year-old girl

Police Private Cited for Work

For his alertness in a search for the man who had raped a 4-year-old girl, Pvt. Norman S. Jones was named policeman of the month for September.

His citation was read and his medal presented yesterday at a luncheon of the Capitol Hill Lions Club, at the Congressional Hotel. The crime occurred on September 14, in a hotel at 518 H st. nw., in the area in which the club's membership is located.

The girl was attacked during the evening in a second-floor bathroom of the hotel, where she lived with her mother. She was left bleeding and in a coma.

Private Jones, with a large force of other officers, sealed off all the exits and began a search of the building, room by room. Jones first went to the roof, and then began a room-by-room inspection of the fifth floor. In one room, occupied by two men, he noticed a pair of dungarees that seemed water-spotted. He went out, but returned to examine them, and found they had been switched for a dry pair.

Private Jones and another officer found the spotted dungarees in another room, and arrested the occupants of the room where the switch had been made. One of them, Hugh Mincey, a 33-year-old roving ironworker, father of four children, confessed the attack and has been indicted. A laboratory examination confirmed, police said, that the dungarees were bloodstained.

Capt. Howard Covell, commander of the First Precinct, in recommending Jones for the monthly award, wrote that "the interest and intelligence shown by Private Jones brought this case to a quick and successful conclusion. I am of the opinion that his initiative and resourcefulness is in keeping with the highest traditions and ideals of the Metropolitan Police Department."

At the luncheon, Inspector Floyd Truscott, assistant superintendent of police, acted as master of ceremonies. He introduced Michael J. Lane, club president, and then Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, who read the citation and presented the medal.

British Boost Dividend Tax

London, Nov. 3 (AP).—The House of Commons tonight approved a boost of a fifth in the industrial dividends tax, after the highly conservative House of Lords had voted lack of confidence in the government's economy plan.

The Commons, with its big Labor majority, defeated an opposition amendment to throw out the government's bill to raise the dividends tax from 25 to 30 percent. Then, without a record vote, it gave the bill, a second reading, which is approval in principle.

The measure applies to dividends paid since October 1.

The no-confidence vote in Lords was 116 against the government to 29 for. The Lords have no power to overthrow a government.

Irish Rail Bill

Dublin, Ireland, Nov. 3 (AP).—The Irish Dail (Parliament) tonight approved in principle a bill to nationalize the country's railroads and other transport services January 1, 1950.

Behind the Iron Curtain

Fear Controls Workers in Red Paradise

(Third in a series)

By Joseph Newman

Paris, Nov. 3 (NYHT).—The anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, proclaimed 32 years ago, will give Soviet leaders another opportunity this month to celebrate an event that changed the face of the world.

Premier Stalin and members of his Politburo again will climb to the top of Lenin's tomb, look at the huge portraits of themselves fixed on the opposite side of Red Square and watch the army of soldiers and workers file by in the annual parade.

Those with memories as long as theirs might entertain a subversive thought: whereas Vladimir Ilyich Lenin, father of the Revolution, used to appear to pay homage to the workers, the latter now pay tribute to their rulers.

But Soviet publicists, in statements beamed to the world, will continue to declare the worker master of the Soviet state and they will fill the air with stories about the great economic progress and social benefits given him.

They will omit reference to one important fact — that the state, which the worker originally was to control, now controls him in every aspect of his daily life.

The All-Union Congress of Trade Unions, meeting for the first time in 17 years, adopted a charter in April that demonstrated again that the workers had lost their vital instrument to the state.

Instead of protecting the interests of the worker against his government, the charter protects the government against the worker. The principal function of unions, as defined in the charter, is to see that the workers fulfill production quotas fixed by the state on the basis of piecework rates, also largely determined by the state.

The charter says the workers "participate" in fixing wages. It fails to observe this is held to strict limits set by the state. The state fixes the total wage fund and the workers have a voice in dividing it up.

The Soviet trade union has become the agency for carrying out the employer's conditions. In effect, it is a state company union, undoubtedly the biggest, best organized and most effective company union in the world today.

The piecework system, promoted by Stalin, now accounts for 92 percent of the wages in one industry, according to Comrade V. V. Kuznetsov, head of the trade unions. This system of pay, once denounced by the Russians as the sweatshop and the worst form of capitalist exploitation, has become the basic wage system of the Soviet Union.

The Soviet employer-state periodically increases the labor norm on which piecework payments are based so the worker is expected to increase the amount he produces for the same wages.

Comrade Kuznetsov, in an official statement January 9, 1948, reported that increased labor output, which exceeded the prewar level by 14.2 percent, had been facilitated by the upward revision of working norms. New collective contracts, he revealed, would further increase these norms.

This frank admission that the state was securing greater output by making the worker produce more for the same wages was not allowed to be transmitted abroad by foreign correspondents for obvious reasons.

The norm on which piece rates are based is not determined by the output of the average worker, but by that of the more productive one. The Stakhanovite, the most productive laborer, becomes the unofficial yardstick by which all other workers are measured.

The new trade union charter, like the old, makes no reference to labor's right to strike for better conditions. Theoretically, he should have no desire to strike since the government is supposed to be his and he cannot be at odds with himself.

But in addition to theory, there is legislation that protects the government against strikes for higher wages, fewer hours and better conditions, in which the Soviet worker is as much interested as his fellow worker in other countries. Anyone who suspends or leaves his work without authorization is subject to imprisonment and forced labor.

In addition to being forbidden to strike, the Soviet worker is bound to his assigned job and denied the freedom to change his work without authorization. Labor decrees issued just before the war continue in full force.

By a decree of June 26, 1940, the Soviet worker can be imprisoned from two to four months if he leaves his job without authorization.

By the same decree, the government authorized itself to punish workers guilty of absenteeism. A worker is found guilty of this crime if he is 20 minutes late to work three times in a month or four times in two successive months. The maximum penalty is six months' corrective labor at his place of employment with a loss of one fourth of his earnings.

Workers in industries producing military equipment (and the number is probably quite large) as well as those in railway and water transport still are subject to the decree of December 26, 1941. If they leave their work without authorization, they are classified as deserters and imprisoned from five to eight years.

At the same time, the government retains the powers of compulsory transfer of workers from one place to another "regardless of the territorial location." It assured these powers by its decree of October 20, 1940.

Having surrendered the right to strike and to defend their working conditions, Soviet workers receive some compensation in the form of social benefits. The state social insurance system provides for old age, disability, sickness, free medical service and allowances to mothers with many children.

These benefits are presented to the worker as a purely Soviet discovery that cannot be found elsewhere in the world, though they do not compare with those in more advanced Western countries like Britain and Sweden.

The Soviet Union has trained some excellent doctors, but the quality of its medical service is generally poor. It was best described by Comrade E. I. Smirnov, former Minister of Public Health, who announced in 1947 that the number of incorrect diagnoses at the Mytishcha Hospital, in the Moscow district, was as high as 75 percent of the patients examined. "The picture is similar in other cities," he said.

But the greatest price the worker and peasant pay, while awaiting fulfillment of Bolshevik promises, is the price of freedom. Just as he has lost his unions to protect his working conditions, so the Soviet worker has lost the legal guarantees that would protect his personal life.

No individual in the Soviet Union has any security in the event of differences of any kind with the state. In a country where legal guarantees are destroyed, fear replaces freedom and that's what has happened in the Soviet Union.

The basic aim of Soviet law, as of the Soviet trade unions, is to secure greater production from the worker, not so much for the worker as for the further expansion of the power and glory of the Soviet state. Everything is subordinated to this basic aim.

Russians More Capitalist Than Any Capitalists

Paris, Nov. 3 (NYTH).—The Soviet government, following a policy it condemns in capitalist countries, is putting everything possible on a paying basis.

Tuition fees have been introduced for school classes above the seventh grade.

The theater is supposed to support itself from the proceeds of ticket sales.

An admission of at least one ruble is charged at the larger public parks.

Transport charges were increased 20 percent recently and the Moscow subway is making a profit—a fact the Soviet censor withheld from the capitalist world.

Dr. Compton Quits Research Chief Post

Dr. Karl T. Compton, educator and atomic scientist, resigned yesterday as chairman of the Armed Forces Research and Development Board for reasons of health.

His resignation was announced by the White House, which released simultaneously a letter to him from President Truman expressing "utmost regret" at his action. In a lengthy letter to the President, Dr. Compton said he must retire "on medical advice which I cannot ignore," but included no details of the nature of his illness.

Dr. Robert F. Rinehart, executive secretary of the board, was named acting chairman by Secretary of Defense Johnson. Dr. Compton's resignation will become effective when a successor is found, but he will begin a leave of absence without pay November 10. The former president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology took over 13 months ago upon the resignation of Dr. Vannevar Bush, wartime chairman of the board.

The Research and Development Board is in charge of scientific research for the armed forces and development, testing and evaluation of their weapons. In his letter of resignation, Dr. Compton told Mr. Truman that recently "for the first time" the board handed the Joint Chiefs of Staff a full report on "every research and development item which may be important in future military strategy." The report, he added, includes "estimates of performance characteristics" and approximate dates when the unspecified "items" would be available.

Alluding to this report in his own letter, the President said it was "indeed reassuring" that such a report had been rendered. It would be, he declared, "an emphatic answer to vocal and superficial critics of defense policies."

Dr. Compton left his post at MIT during the war to serve for two years as chief of field services for the Office of Scientific Research and Development. After the war he served as chairman of a presidential commission that strongly urged peacetime military training for all able-bodied young Americans. This program was rejected by Congress.

Mopping Up

China Reds Start Push On Mainland

Hongkong, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Chinese Communists were reported today to have begun their "final" drive to clear the Asiatic mainland of Nationalist troops and to capture the refugee capital of Chungking.

They also were reported assaulting Tinghai, island naval base 100 miles south of Shanghai, from which the Nationalists are directing their blockade of Chinese ports.

Chinese territory around the Portuguese colony of Macao was being invested rapidly by the Communists.

Chungking reports indicated Gen. Lin Pian, the Reds' best strategist, was rolling southward toward Kweilin. From Chuanhsien two other columns were expected to converge from the east and south.

It is in this area that Nationalist Gen. Pai Chung-hsi has massed approximately 200,000 troops, the biggest Nationalist force still on the mainland.

Army Widens Opportunities For Negroes

Army Secretary Gordon Gray announced a widening of the new Army policy on equality of opportunity in the service.

He declared that "no individual who qualifies for a military occupational specialty will be denied the opportunity to follow it because of race or color," and added that in carrying out this policy "qualified Negro specialists would be assigned to some white units."

Nothing Specific

Under the new policy announced a month ago—which opened all Army schools and military specialty qualifications to Negroes—nothing specific was said about their assignment after training and qualification.

Negro leaders feared that if assignments were confined to Negro units, there would be no additional jobs and the wider opportunity promised would be meaningless.

Then on October 27, the Army sent out a message to all commands which confirmed their suspicions. Following publication of the order yesterday, Secretary Gray issued a statement declaring that it "violates" the Army's announced racial policy.

As soon as the "administrative message" came to his attention. Gray said, he ordered it rescinded. He then went on to spell out more specifically what the policy meant.

Guarantees Given

"This policy," said the Army announcement, "guarantees that qualified Negro soldiers will be given equal opportunity with other qualified soldiers to practice their specialties if vacancies exist for these specialties.

"Secretary Gray stated that it was anticipated that as a result of the announced policy qualified Negro specialists would be assigned to some white units. He said this does not mean that existing Negro units will be broken up or that Negro personnel of these units will be scattered throughout the Army."

$260,000 Bail Set for Reds

$20,000 each for seven of the defendants.

The other four put up $30,000 apiece in bail. Eugene Dennis drew higher bail because he once jumped bail in a California case. John B. Williamson, Jacob Stachel and Irving Potash were given higher bails because the Government has described them as deportable aliens.

Three officials of the bail fund of the Civil Rights Congress put up $260,000 in negotiable 2½ percent United States Treasury bonds in $5000 denominations. The United States Attorney General's Office has branded the congress subversive.

Officials of the congress said the money came from public contributions. These are put into a special fund to be used for bail in cases in which the congress interests itself.

United States Irving Saypol balked at accepting the congress bonds. He wanted to know who owned them and under what authority the congress offered them.

Finally, the Appeals Court told the defense to get affidavits from trustees of the defense fund stipulating that the bonds could be used for bail. When that was done they were released.

All Political Prisoners Freed In New Indonesian Republic

Batavia, Java, Nov. 3 .—The Dutch today gave amnesty to several thousand political prisoners.

The amnesty was directed to all persons who had committed "misdemeanors clearly emanating from political conflict" between The Netherlands and Indonesians.

The pardons will be effective Friday. With the release of about 2000 Indonesian prisoners arranged under the United Nations truce, almost all persons imprisoned for their political views will go free.

In the Dutch East Indies, reaction was mixed over the signing of agreements at The Hague yesterday which created the new republic in a Dutch-Indonesian union, subject to parliamentary approval.

Batavia newspapers, both Indonesian and Dutch, ranged from a cautious indorsement to outright criticism of the agreements.

Former Republican Premier Sutan Sjahrir said he thought there would be difficulty getting the Dutch parliament to vote the plan.

Amtorg Officials Coming Here

New York, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Five officials of Amtorg, Russia's purchasing agency in this country, today agreed to go to Washington to plead to a Government indictment charging them with failure to register as Soviet agents.

They were indicted in Washington on October 21. Less than a week later Amtorg agreed to register with the Justice Department under the Foreign Agents Registration Act. The District of Columbia court tardy compliance whether their tardy compliance with the law purges them of the charge.

The five deefndants are A. V. Zakharov, president and chairman of Amtorg; V. P. Rebrov, vice president; S. A. Shevchenko, treasurer; A. A. Istchenko, secretary, and G. N. Ogloblin, assistant treasurer.

Four Police Felled As Pro-Commies Parade in Harlem

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Four police fell under a barrage of bricks and bottles tonight during a noisy, pro-Communist torchlight parade through the tense and crowded heart of Harlem. The parade honored one of the 11 convicted Red leaders.

The officers were not injured critically, but were taken to hospitals.

Four Negroes and two whites were arrested before police reserves reached the scene and restored order.

The parade of 2000 persons on the avenue got out of the hands of some dozen cops on routine duty.

The crowd took up the chant of "we shall not be moved" and a sound truck blared "we will march" as the crowd surged against the police beneath the flickering flare of torches.

The parade honored city councilman Benjamin J. Davis, jr. Two of the other Communist leaders, Henry Winston and Robert Thompson, also made speeches to the crowd before the parade.

All made bonds of $20,000 each a few hours earlier and were released from Federal detention cells. Davis and Winston are Negroes.

Burgman Says Nazi Work Not Treason

Herbert J. Burgman admitted on the witness stand yesterday that he knowingly broadcast war propaganda for the Nazis but denied he was a traitor.

Cross-examination of the 53-year-old Minnesota native accused of aiding the enemy during the war for 1500 reichsmarks per month began in District Court.

Several members of the jury snickered as the balding Burgman related his fear of the Gestapo and his efforts to get enough food to live on in wartime Germany. He said his monthly salary was equal to "30 potatoes."

Denies Betraying U. S.

Burgman sparred quietly with Prosecutor Wiliam A. Paisley during the examination and his answers seemed always calm and polite.

"Did you at any time betray this country?" Burgman had been asked by his own attorney, James J. Laughlin.

"No, of course not," Burgman replied.

His answer was the same when asked whether he felt he was giving "aid and comfort" to the enemy.

But, he calmly admitted that he was the "Joe Scanlon" of the German station "Debunk" and said his broadcasts were "war propaganda."

Followed Gestapo Orders

He said he was warned that if he left Berlin, the Gestapo would kill him and that he was ordered by the Gestapo to broadcast. He flatly denied living in luxury and said he had to kick back a third of his salary to his superiors and pay another third in taxes.

"What was left was enough to starve six days in the week and have one real meal on Sunday," he said.

He said he objected to broadcasting the propaganda and once threatened suicide rather than reveal secrets as to vital mineral stockpiles about which he had learned while a clerk in the military attache's office of the American Embassy in Berlin prior to the war.

Election Crisis

Cabinet Is Changed In Egypt

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Premier Hussein Sirry Pasha dissolved his four-party coalition cabinet today and formed a cabinet of independents to speed preparations for a national election.

Sirry submitted th resignation of his 100-day-old cabinet this morning and King Farouk immediately commissioned him to form another. By midafternoon the new list was complete.

The cabinet crisis was caused by interparty squabbling over proposed changes in Egypt's electoral systems, changes made necessary by a sharp rise in population since the war.

Dr. Mohammed Hashim Bey, Minister of State in both cabinets, said "the new cabinet policy is based on the same principles as the previous government."

Russians Repeat Frontier Violation, Tehran Says

Tehran, Iran, Nov. 3 (AP).—A high ranking government source said today Russian troops made a new foray into Iran Sunday.

The incident was reported to have occurred at Baghcheh Sara, north of Astara, a port on the western shore of the Caspian Sea. The Iranians have accused the Russians several times in recent months of violating the frontier.

The informant said Russian soldiers Sunday attacked Iranian border troops, who resisted. Firing was said to have lasted for several hours, but no casualties were reported. When Iranian reinforcements arrived, the Russians withdrew, the informant said.

French Reds Lose Bid to Force Vote on Cabinet

Paris, Nov. 3 (NYHT.)—Communists in the National Assembly today failed to force a vote on the composition of Prime Minister Georges Bidault's cabinet.

Bidault asked that the debate be "indefinitely postponed." This was in effect asking for a vote of confidence without discussion. He said: "We have a lot to do: Budget, international negotiations, a special bonus for the workers, collective bargaining."

The Assembly voted by a show of hands to "postpone" debate. Bidault's cabinet today decided to pay a special bonus to low-salaried workers and to ask the Assembly to repeal immediately the law freezing wages and permit a return to free collective bargaining.

Homeopathic Hospital To Get $11,000 Bequest

Frederick, Md., Nov. 3 (Spl.).—Homeopathic Hospital, Washington, D. C., will receive $11,000 in the first distribution approved by the Orphans' Court in the estate of the late Mrs. Elsie Getty of New Windsor. Officials said the institution will probably receive about $1000 additional when the final accounting is made. The executor, Benjamin L. Shuff, reported $103,209.24 in his first account of the estate's assets.

Virginia, Minn., Nov. 3 (AP).—The tricksters got tricked in Virginia on Halloween night it was discovered belatedly today.

The doctor asked to see samples of treats they had collected.

Search to Resume Today for Missing Hyattsville Man

Search will resume this morning along the Patuxent River near Upper Marlboro, Md., for Arthur L. Johnson, 54, a Hyattsville builder who is believed to have drowned after being reported missing since Monday.

Anne Arundel County police abandoned dragging operations after dusk last night, but will resume today. Johnson, of 3901 Jefferson st., Hyattsville, was last seen Monday afternoon, when he told his son, Bernard Neil Johnson, 21, that he was going to take a final cruise in their motorboat before storing it for winter.

The vessel was later found overturned on the Anne Arundel County side of the river.

A resident of Hyattsville for 19 years, Johnson previously lived in Berwyn.

Miss Aikens died October 21 in Detroit at the age of 81.

Mrs. Elsie Casassa, R. N., director of nurses, presided. Miss Anita Krein, '52, played the organ while testimonials were given by Mrs. Blanche De Shazor, '02, and two former directors of nurses, Mrs. Frances Elzey and Miss Mary Wolford.

Policeman Hurt Chasing Car Suspect

A motorcycle policeman was in Emergency Hospital yesterday with painful internal and hip injuries suffered at the end of a several - block chase of a suspected automobile burglar.

Pvt. Raymond

He is Pvt. Francis Raymond, 32, of 816 G st. ne., attached to the traffic division.

Late Wednesday night, an unidentified citizen pointed out a youth at North Capitol and E sts. to Private Raymond, asserting the young man had just broken into a car on a parking lot. The youth fled on foot.

Raymond started after him on his machine. The chase led into Union Station, where Raymond couldn't ride, and couldn't shoot. The fleet-footed fugitive went down a stairway in a baggage section of the station. Raymond tripped and went down too, head over heels. Then, he couldn't get up.

Terminal employes seized the youth, whom police later identified as Henry C. Wilson, 19, of 61 Fenton, st. ne. In Municipal Court yesterday, he was sentenced by Judge Thomas D. Quinn to 90 days on a petty larceny charge and to 30 more for destroying property—an automobile window.

CIO Again Rebukes Leftists on Issues

Fireman Finds Missing Girl

RICHARD GARDNER, member of the Riverdale Heights Volunteer Fire Department, who lives at 6313 59th st., is the man who found 7-year-old Claire Marie Hanratty, missing 11 hours from her home in Seabrook, Md. He discovered her walking along the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks, a mile from the Lanham Elementary School. Claire got lost about 2:30 p. m. Wednesday while returning home from her first day at a new school

Cleveland, Nov. 3 (AP).—Left-wing opposition was beaten down today in its effort to change the CIO's stand on international political and labor affairs.

The CIO convention reaffirmed its support of America's foreign policy, embracing the Marshall Plan, the United Nations and the Atlantic Pact.

It also backed the CIO executive board for pulling the organization out of the World Federation of Trade Unions which the board said is Communist-dominated.

The votes were by about the same 10-to-1 margin by which leaders of leftist unions have been beaten on every major convention issue so far.

The convention also voted unanimous support for the Nation's striking coal miners in "their righteous and heroic struggle against the united power of entrenched industrial and financial interests."

Harry Bridges, denying that his arguments were "dictated through any pipeline from Moscow," led the left-wing opposition on both international issues.

The Longshoremen's Union head accused the CIO's powerful right-wing majority of "trying to hang everything wrong on the hammer and sickle of Soviet Russia" in dragging up its foreign policy resolution.

Bridges assailed President Truman's foreign policy particularly as it concerns China, Great Britain, Greece, France, the Philippines and Russia.

"Anyone who thinks there is nothing wrong with Russia is a damn fool," he declared. "But anyone who thinks the present labor government of Britain is going around the world bringing good things to people is a damn fool, too."

Bridges' attack on Britain brought a vigorous reply from George Baldanzi, vice president of the Textile Workers.

Baldanzi said "our opponents should get up and criticize imperialism in any form, whether it be British, American—or Russian."

Abe Feinglass of the Fur and Leather Workers Union said the Marshall Plan was "giving guns to the Nazis."

Big Joe Curran, right-wing leader of the National Maritime Union of the said Bridges' arguments were similar to those of Andrei Vishinsky, Russian Foreign Minister.

"The only difference is that Vishinsky has a better command of the English language and phraseology," he added.

Mrs. Lillian Sherwood of the Michigan State CIO council auxiliary was elected chairman today of the CIO's department of women's auxiliaries.

Mrs. Sherwood succeeds Faye Stevenson of Washington, D. C., described by CIO officers as representing a left-wing faction in the women's group.

Indiana Makes Plea for Coal

4 cents an hour in social insurance. Under the Bethlehem formula, the company will provide $100-a-month pensions, made up of the company contribution and the Federal Social Security.

The company hasn't stated what its portion of the pension will cost, while union estimates range up to 12 cents an hour. The company is also putting up 2½ cents an hour for social insurance, with the employes putting up an additional 2½ cents. Bethlehem's contribution to the pension fund will decrease as Social Security payments go up.

Several other big steel companies are believed willing to go along with the Bethlehem formula, in modified form, but, because of the complexity of the problem of determining the actual cost of such a program, are taking time to study the situation before entering into a peace settlement.

Philip Murray, president of the CIO and the Steelworkers, yesterday said it is "unlikely" that any new major agreements will be reached before next week. In Detroit, Rotary Electrical Steel Co., with 500 production employes, signed up along the lines of the Bethlehem formula. Company and union agreed that the settlement will cost the company about 13 cents and includes company-financed pensions.

The peace move in steel sparked the first back-to-work movement in the railroad industry, which had had to lay off thousands of workers because of the coal and steel strikes. New York Central announced it will recall 500 furloughed employes Monday to meet the increased demand for gondola cars in the steel industry.

John L. Lewis, meanwhile, was believed to be seeking a chink in the solid front of the soft coal operators who through two bargaining groups—the National Bituminous Wage Conference and the Southern Coal Producers Association—have refused the UMW's demands for higher pay, shorter hours, and increased welfare fund royalties.

He hammered away at Indiana, where the Governor has proclaimed a state of emergency because of the lack of fuel. Lewis charged that "two millionaire coal operators control the policy of the Indiana coal operators . . ." He named them as R. H. Sherwood of Indianapolis and Hubert Elmert Howard, whom he identified as now serving as chairman of the Defense Department's Personnel Policy Board.

Sherwood, who heads the Central Indiana Coal Co., denied he controlled the operators. "They don't take orders from me," he said.

Meanwhile, Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) declared that he had been misquoted last week in a story transmitted from Cleveland, which said the Senator was opposed to immediate use of the Taft-Hartley Act to end the steel and coal strikes.

Taft informed the Associated Press yesterday that at a news conference in Cleveland on October 27 a reporter inquired if he left President Truman should immediately invoke the injunctive provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act to end the two strikes.

"I replied," Taft said yesterday, "that since I did not possess full information on conditions, I was not in a position to say."

Four days later, in Cincinnati, the Senator said in an address:

"While I have not full access to all the sources of information, it certainly looks as if the coal strike has reached a point where it threatens the health of the people of the United States.

"As it reaches that point, the President's duty to make use of the Taft-Hartley law seems to me to be clear."

Hod Carriers Injunction Is Dissolved

A temporary restraining order issued last week against the International Hod Carriers and Building Laborers Union (AFL) was dissolved yesterday in District Court.

The restraining order had been issued after Local 764 of the union charged that parent body officials were remis sin allowing Local 74 to enter the private dwelling and apartment house construction field here held by Local 764.

Attorney Nicholas J. Chase, representing the international, charged that District Court lacked jurisdiction to issue restraining orders or injunctions because the Norris-Laguardia Act forbade court interference in labor disputes of this kind.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut set November 21 for a hearing on whether he should issue an injunction in the case at that time. He was informed that Local 74 would not in the meantime enter the field of Local 764.

Ching Plans to Make Coal Strike Move Today

New York, Nov. 3 (NYHT).—Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediator and Conciliation Service, tonight said he expects to step into the 46-day-old coal strike some time Friday.

Ching declined to amplify his statement. It was reported, however, that Ching will seek to arrange a meeting in Washington Friday with John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and that he is planning separate and joint conferences with mine operators and the union leader next week.

Pay Boosts By CTC Put at Half U. S. Rate

Wage increases in the transit industry nationally ranged from 2 to 25 cents an hour from July, 1948, to July, 1949, with most in the 10 to 12-cent bracket, Capital Transit Co. wage arbitrators were told yesterday.

Opening the case of CTC union employes seeking a 25-cent-an-hour general wage increase, Eli L. Oliver, research economist, declared that Bureau of Labor Statistics figures showed Washington area living costs were higher than in 34 other cities.

Survey Figures Revised

He said the survey originally was made in 1947, but adjustments on the basis of subsequent BLS reports indicated it still costs more to live in Washington than any other city checked.

Oliver said that compared to wages in 12 other large cities where unions have contracts, Washington scales are lower than all except St. Louis, when the comparison is geared to cost-of-living figures.

National wage rates since 1947, in the transit field, have increased by 20 cents an hour, while only a 10-cent rise was granted here, he said.

Cites Local Comparisons

In specific comparisons locally, Oliver cited 1940 figures showing railroad mechanics had a 6 to 8 cent disadvantage with CTC mechanics. He said that now rail workers get 22 cents an hour more than transit employes.

Railway Express truck drivers in 1940 received 6 cents less than streetcars operators, but now they are paid $1.54 an hour while the transit operators receive $1.45.

The hearing before a five-man arbitration board will continue today at 9:30 a. m. in the Hamilton Hotel.

Jurist Studies Suit to Void Loan Laws

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut of District Court yesterday took under advisement a suit to strike down as void the new District regulations over money lenders charging 6 percent or less interest.

The test of the law which went into effect here November 1 was brought by the Columbia Auto Loan, Inc. The company challenges the loan law as discriminatory in that it gives banks and other such firms an advantage.

The District Court jurist did not announce when he would make his findings in the case but invited the District government to seek to take depositions of members of the company to determine their loan practices.

The company lawyers charged that the District Commissioners in the new regulations are illegally forcing into the law a new concept of "interest." Under the regulations, it is charged, interest may include notary fees and insurance policies issued in connection with loans as well as the fee for the use of money, the usual definition of interest.

3 in Montgomery Guilty of Health Law Violations

Three Montgomery County residents were convicted in Rockville Police Court yesterday of violation of health laws by failing to provide proper sewage disposal at their homes.

Judge Alger Y. Barbee postponed sentencing in all cases until December 1 after all three declared they would make proper provision.

The convicted men were Charles V. Kramer, 42, of Rockville, and Kester Winstead, 30, and Grant Buttery, 35, both of Gaithersburg. Kramer told Judge Barbee he has moved his family to another home and will not return until necessary improvements have been made. Buttery said that since service of the warrant, he has made arrangements for the work.

Maximum sentence for the offense is $100 fine and 90 days in jail, or both.

No New Leads In Falls Church Bank Holdup

Arlington police and the FBI combed Northern Virginia yesterday for further clews in the Wednesday morning holdup of Fast Falls Church Bank, but said they had no new leads last night.

Two men, one of whom wore a false mustache, made off with $13,468 after sticking up bank manager Mrs. Beatrice Catte about 9:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Their abandoned get-away car, a stolen black 1947 Buick, was picked up at 7 p.m. Wednesday at 26th and N. Glebe rd., by Arlington police. The robbers were believed to have switched to a blue 1942 Hudson with Michigan tags, also reported stolen in the District.

Alcoholic Clinic Parley Sought

District officials concerned with setting up a full-time alcoholic clinic at the Wightman School Building will seek a meeting soon with Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger to work out details of the plan.

A meeting scheduled for yesterday to correlate plans with law and budget provisions had to be canceled because Seckinger could not attend.

Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg, head of the clinic that now operates on a part-time basis, said he hoped details could be worked out soon.

Court Told Tucker Had Only 20 HP

Chicago, Nov. 3 (AP).—A former Tucker Corp. engineer testified today that one of the first Tucker auto engines built delivered only 20 horsepower instead of the 160 horsepower expected.

He also testified that several types of brakes were tested but that they would not have fit on the car even if they had proved satisfactory.

The testimony was given by Paul G. Wellenkamp of Bernardsville, N. J., former $20,000-a-year manager of the Tucker engineering department. He testified at the multi-million dollar Tucker Federal Court mail fraud and conspiracy trial of Preston Tucker and seven associates.

In another court a plan to advise Tucker's 44,000 stockholders of a proposal to reorganize the firm through 40 million dollars in new financing was tentatively approved by Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe.

A hearing on a motion to quash a court order for the arrest of Tucker and his wife, Vera, for alleged failure to pay a judgment for the balance due on a farm they once owned near Noblesville, Ind., was set for Friday in Municipal Court.

Earlier in the Tucker trial today, another former executive testified that the first model of the assembled Tucker car was made partly of wood. Lee Treese of Ypsilanti, Mich., former vice president, said wooden facsimiles were used for the generator, oil actuator and fuel injector and that there were wooden parts used in the chassis.

On cross-examination, Treese said it was customary for companies to use facsimiles such as wood when building pilot autos.

On direct examination Treese said the only plans he received for building Tucker cars were photographs. On cross-examination, he said there were some blueprints for disc brakes from a California concern.

Vote on Vets' Bonus

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (AP).—A stiff battle is expected next Tuesday when Pennsylvania's voters decide whether they want to pay the State's World War II veterans a bonus.

If the bonus is approved, veterans will receive $10 for each month of World War II service in the continental United States and $15 for each month overseas with a maximum payment of $500. The average is expected to be about $350.

SLEEPY TIME GREETING—President Truman, up before the sun, stands on the rear platform of his train to greet several thousand who turned out when the train stopped briefly in Savanna, Ill., yesterday. With him is Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, military aide, rubbing a sleepy eye

Truman Opens Scathing Fire On Opponents of 'Fair Deal'

Mr. Truman a fleece-lined storm coat. He wore it over the entire wind-swept route."

Riding with him in an open car at the head of the long caravan was Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) and Governor Youngdahl. Mayor Hoyer left the car at the St. Paul city line, where Mayor Edward K. Delaney took over.

Friendly crowds yelled, "Hi, Harry!" Some recognized Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan and shouted "We want a deep freeze." A few of the improvised signs read, "Harry, 100 to one," "Yea, Truman, Yea" and "I Love You, Mr. President."

Inspects Youth Project

The parade stopped at "Young Yardville," where the President inspected the Minneapolis Cooperative Youth Project. At St. Thomas College, cadets were lined up at present arms, and Mr. Truman shook hands with the Rev. Vincent J. Flynn, president of the college.

At the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children Mr. Truman went inside and passed from bed to bed, asking each child his name and how he was getting along.

In front of the State Capitol in St. Paul he received a 21-gun salute from the State National Guard. Then he visited the Minnesota Historical Society Building.

Despite his tongue-in-cheek reference to tonight's speech as "non-political," Mr. Truman rode into Minneapolis on a 9-car train in almost 1948 "whistle-stop" style.

He mentioned neither the Republican nor Democratic Party by name but the tone of the whole trip smacked of the 1950 Congressional campaign he kicked off on Labor Day. So did his rear platform appearances along the way.

At Savanna, Ill., he was greeted by a band and presented two fat turkeys He told a station-side crowd of 800 he is simply "trying to carry out the Democratic platform."

Another crowd of several hundred awaited him at North Lacrosse, Wisc. School was out for the occasion and Mr. Truman made a neighborly speech. There he received a pair of duck-hunter's hip boots and a blue American Legion "40 and 8" cap.

Between these two stops he climbed into the top tier of a B. and O. Railroad glass-roofed "Vista-dome" to view the rambling upper reaches of the Mississippi.

"Look at the ducks," he enthused when he saw grey specks on the muddy waters. A railroad official corrected him.

"Mud hens," he said.

In his speech tonight at the St. Paul Auditorium, Mr. Truman recalled another "Truman Day" just one year and one day ago.

As a result, he said, the Eightieth Congress, which he called a "calamity," was "turned out" by the voters, he said. His new Congress has "reversed the backward trend and has made substantial progress in many fields," he continued.

Sees 1950 Mandate

Mr. Truman predicted the Eighty-first Congress will do "a good deal more" next year and said the people will express themselves "even more clearly" for his program in 1950.

Then he told the story of the "Louisiana Purchase" without musical comedy effects.

When Thomas Jefferson paid Napoleon 15 million dollars for the vast area now incorporated into 13 States, he said the "reactionaries" of that day opposed the cost of it, called it unconstitutional, charged it would bring in a lot of undesirable people. He said they even predicted the country would "fall apart."

"That kind of propaganda did not prevail then, and it will not prevail today," he said.

Today's "reactionaries," like those of frontier America, "are afraid of more democracy and greater freedom for all our citizens," he said.

As a "staunch shield against communism and . . . every other form of totalitarianism" he proposed a 10-point credo for the "general welfare of all our people—not just a privileged few."

He said it would contribute to a wide distribution of the fruits of production "among all our citizens."

Mr. Truman's 10 points:

A "fair price" for farmers and business men.

Good wages and equality of bargaining power for labor.

Protection of small business and cooperatives from being "smothered by monopolies."

Use of natural resources "for the benefit of all," instead of exploitation "for private greed."

An assured income for old people and the disabled.

Family protection against loss of income resulting from accident, illness or unemployment.

Decent housing for all at prices people can afford.

Educational opportunities for all our young people.

Better health and medical care for everyone.

Equal rights and opportunities for all, "free from fear or discrimination."

That kind of progress, he said, is opposed by leftist reactionaries who talk about revolution, and "standpatters" to the right who say it means "bankruptcy."

"Between these two extremes," declared Truman, "the main stream of American life rolls steadily onward toward a better world."

Segal Sermon Listed

Rabbi Henry Segal will give a sermon on "God's World" at 8:30 p. m. today at B'nai Israel Synagogue, 14th and Emerson sts. nw.

served also to point up the financial hard times that have fallen on the GOP since its 1948 election defeat.

Kemper said he told the committee in August he would quit automatically whenever the party's cash surplus fell below $125,000. His letter of resignation said he was enclosing a $35,000 check for operating expenses, and that it chopped the bank balance down to $90,000.

The letter was "without reference to the responsibility" for the financial headache.

Feels He Was 'Handicapped'

But it went on to say that as GOP treasurer, Kemper is "handicapped" in his desire to help elect a Republican Congress and President because he and the party don't agree on some political issues—specifically, the bipartisan foreign policy.

He suggested that American taxpayers are paying for the British Labor Party's "seduction" of British voters, and that Americans, including potential GOP contributors, "shudder at the thought of adopting socialist panaceas here."

Kemper and Everett M. Dirksen, former Congressman from Pekin, Ill., were among a handful of Illinois delegates who bucked the pro-Taft bulk of the State's group at Philadelphia in 1948. Dirksen, who voted for the Marshall Plan, now is running for United States Senator and is highly critical of foreign aid spending.

Kemper made public his resignation in a letter to Guy Gabrielson, Republican National Committee chairman. The letter was dated October 28, last Friday, but Gabrielson's office in Washington said he had not even received it.

Brewster Not Worried

In Portland, Me., Senator Brewster (R., Me.), Senate Republican Campaign Committee chairman, said he feels sure that "both the votes and the money will be available as needed" for next year's congressional and the 1952 presidential elections.

He said Kemper is only the party's disbursing officer and that the responsibility for raising funds is that of the party's finance chairman, Sinclair Weeks of Massachusetts. Weeks is "doing a good job," Brewster said.

Science Eyed River Blasting

The "mystery" blast Wednesday which jarred northwest Washington and nearby Maryland was scientific music to the ears of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

Disturbed residents finally learned the explosion occurred some 15 miles northwest of the District, where workmen for the second time in a month blasted tons of granite from the Potomac River bed to complete a path for a new natural gas pipe line.

And pleased scientists of Carnegie's Geophysical Laboratory and Department of Terrestrial Magnetism hope to learn more about the earth's crust from the detonation.

Carnegie had 16 observers equipped with very sensitive, portable seismographs at eight stations set up at points ranging from the Darnestown, Md., area, 3 miles from the blast, to points in Pennsylvania, near York and Mercersburg, 70 miles away. The instruments all recorded the blast.

Dr. Howard E. Tatel, phycisist, explained that observers can tell "roughly" what type of substance in the earth's crust that the seismic waves, set off by the blast, travelled through in reaching a particular distant point by analyzing the speed.

Rules Called Damper To Small Business

W. W. Vandeveer, a retired Cleveland businessman, told a House committee yesterday that small business is being "hamstrung" by Federal taxes and regulations—not by big competitors.

Vandeveer is former president of Allied Oil Co., Inc., a small company recently merged with Ashland Oil and Refining Co. He told a House Judiciary Subcommittee which is investigating monopoly growth in business:

"I am sure you will discover that forging more chains on big business does not liberate small business."

Vandeveer said it was not competition from major oil companies but potential death tax obligations which forced him to merge his company to save it from liquidation.

He made these suggestions:

Balance the Federal budget, or "increasing taxes will siphon off the money needed for venture capital and for the growth of small business."

Assess the same taxes on all business, "even if the business distributes its profits as patronage dividends to its customers."

Eliminate double taxation on corporate earnings—"either collect the taxes on corporation net earnings, or collect them on the dividends paid stockholders—but not on both."

Revise tax laws to allow small enterprises to build up capital reserves out of earnings.

Devise a way to permit executors for owners of small closed companies to pay estate taxes at the lower capital gains rate.

"As a final suggestion," he added, "I would say let's stop this trend to regulate all business from Washington. Even if it did not eventually lead to the end of the competitive system, it should be halted as an expensive burden on business and every taxpaying citizen."

Harvard Dean

Mason May Take Truman Adviser Post

By Robert S. Allen

Dr. Edward Mason, dean of the Harvard School of Public Administration, has been offered the chairmanship of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

The 51-year-old Iowa-born economist is considering President Truman's offer.

Mason is not a New Dealer, although he was an economic consultant of the Labor Department from 1936 to 1939. A graduate of Harvard and Oxford, he has taught economics at Harvard for many years. Between 1941 and 1945 he was with the Office of Strategic Services. Later he was with the State Department for a time, and at the 1947 Moscow Conference was chief economist of the American delegation.

will be put on the market in 1950. In the first year, 1942, only 126,000 were put out. This rose to 2 million in 1947; to 8 million in 1948 and to 14 million this year.

The birds are bred mostly for increased egg production. Results, it is said, show the new strains will produce from 225 to 250 eggs per hen per year compared with about a 180-average now.

The hybrid chicken is the result of years of monotonous inbreeding. It's breeding calls for careful selection of the best of various crossbreeds that are then inbred for several generations to produce the results desired.

It is the fulfillment to the limit of the Mendelian theory of genetics, of which Henry A. Wallace has been a student since 1905. About that time he visited the laboratory of Gregor Mendel at Brunn, Czechoslovakia, with his father, Henry Cantwell Wallace, who later was Secretary of Agriculture in the Cabinet of Presidents Hoover and Coolidge.

Idea Called Simple

Wallace started his experiments in genetics at Iowa State College at Ames, Iowa., after his return from his European trip.

(Incidentally, the Mendelian theory, which Wallace has proved in the hybrid corn development and now is proving with his hybrid chickens, has been repudiated by the Soviet government as a false genetical science.)

As explained by Henry B. Wallace, the former Vice President's son, the company's breeding practices are simple in theory, but involved in application.

The company constantly carries on the development of new inbred lines from standard-breed birds. Selected birds from the resulting single crosses are mated to other single crosses to produce experimental crosses. The experimental crosses then are testd in comparison with commercial varieties.

Outstanding new combinations of inbreds then are reproduced in quantity. Nine commercial varieties with different characteristics will be available next year. The customer may buy the particular cross that suits his conditions.

Four breeding farms handle the breeding work. They are at Johnston, Dallas Center and Waukee, Iowa, and South Salem, N. Y. where the former Secretary of Agriculture, Vice President and Secretary of Commerce does his experimenting.

Some of the work is being done at Doylestown, Pa., where the Wallace Hy-Cross Hatchery, operated by another son of the former Vice President, is in charge.

The chicks are distributed in 19 States and in Canada. The nearest to Washington are Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Distribution is through locally owned hatcheries.

The Wallace Hy-Line chicks sell for just twice as much as other chicks. Like hybrid seed corn, they will not reproduce successfully. That means that the seed stock must be rebought each year—which makes the Wallace operation a continuing profitable venture.

Land Agency Funds Found

tion to process the financial arrangements for undertaking the plans and programs for District redevelopment projects until Congress meets in January and can again consider an appropriation."

The Federal housing agency came back with this three-point conclusion in a letter dated November 2:

1. The D. C. land agency "appears to be eligible" to receive advances and funds for surveys and plans in preparation of projects that may be assisted under Title 1 of the 1949 act.

2. No such advances may be used in connection with either the partially planned Marshall Heights or Barry Farms project, both in Southeast Washington.

3. "While the D.C. land agency is authorized to transfer to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission so much of any such advance of funds as the Commissioners determine to be necessary to enable the planning commission to carry out its function in connection with the preparation of project plans, the land agency may retain and use such part of any such advance of funds to cover employes, office space and supplies essential in obtaining surveys and plans."

The Commissioners, who have already approved an advance request from the National Capital Housing Authority for a 4000-unit low-rent housing program in the District, must also pass on a land agency request.

Lansburgh said he will seek an early appointment with HHFA officials to work out further details for securing money to set his agency in motion.

Hear Ye, D. C.! N. Y. Gets an Earful, Too!

Sound is sweeping the country. Washington, with its embattled citizenry fighting a civil war over "Freedom of the Ear," otherwise known as "Music As You Ride to Keep the Fare Down," is not alone in its troubles with man-made decibels.

The New Yorker's Talk of the Town Notes and Comment reports this week that not only has Grand Central Station been wired for sound, but that the Albany Hospital has installed background music for its psychiatric wing.

"The individual is becoming the captive of the soundmakers, "grumbles the New Yorkers, "and is losing the right to choose whether he listens or doesn't listen."

Without mentioning the Washington issue over Capital Transit's music-commercials-news-and-the-right-time-and-weather-forecast programs, the weekly fulminates:

"We don't think . . . that a passenger on a streetcar should have to listen to advice some merchant is willing to pay to express."

Antimusic Washingtonians who have already taken their case to the Public Utilities Commission, and who threaten to take it further if necessary, will find the magazine's parting advice interesting if inadequate, to wit:

"We strongly advise any person who finds himself exposed to amplified sound in hospitals, terminals, or common carriers to protest to the management or call the police."

Transit Radio Survey Hailed

Post's ballot is a swell idea. It really rings a bell if the people will respond."

He cited an admitted flaw in the ballot, the fact that it will give only a "yes" or "no" test on the radio issue, without measuring various refinements of opinion. For example, said Wender, he enjoys the music while you ride, and feels it does not interfere either with reading or thinking. But he also feels the quality of the commercials could be greatly improved.

Two employes in the office of Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) indorsed the plan for the balloting, while stating their own strong objections to transit radio. Miss Joan Dick, who testified against the radio setup in the PUC hearings, said the ballot "is a very good idea," and the comment was indorsed by Irving Novick. Both called the radio broadcasts a violation of personal liberties.

Two other civic leaders, neither of whom participated in the PUC hearings, indorsed both the idea of transit radio and the idea of The Post ballot. They were Mrs. Milton Dunn, who is frequently a spokesman for the District League of Women Voters in Capitol Hill hearings, and Woolsey Hall, former president of the Federation of Civic Associations.

Mrs. Dunn pointed out that the league does not take a stand on issues like the transit radio question, but said that she herself had found the radio music in the transit vehicles pleasant the few times she has heard it.

As for the ballot, Mrs. Dunn said "any kind of a ballot in the District is a good thing."

Hall, long president of the Civic Federation, said the ballot would give people in the Washington area "a good chance to express themselves. It will be very nice."

Of four others who participated in the PUC hearings, two on each side, indorsed the plan for the Post ballot while restating their convictions on the radio issue.

John H. Connaughton, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations and an outspoken supporter of the transit radio set-up, said the plan for The Post ballot "has been presented in a very nice, substantial way, and it's a nice thing for The Post to do. Of course public opinion is not the final arbiter of this question."

R. A. Seelig, a leading spokesman against the radio system when he appeared in the hearings as representative of the Transit Riders' Association, said "it is very desirable that we do have a ballot such as The Post is planning.

"There has been a great deal of talk about what the majority of the people think on this issue," said Seelig. "I feel that the polls so far have not taken a wide enough sample, and that some of the questions have been loaded. When you ask a streetcar operator if radio interferes with safe operation, you put him on a spot. You're asking him if he thinks he's going to be an unsafe driver."

Seelig said the balloting result should not be the final determinant—"I really think a majority favor transit radio broadcasts. But suppose this involved a question of eating limburger cheeze, having it served to all passengers on streetcars and buses, and having it stuffed down the throats of those who don't like limburger cheese. I think limburger cheese and the transit radio programs are entirely comparable—one would be forced eating, and the other is forced listening."

"This is just not an issue to be [illegible] by majority vote," said Seelig.

Grille Man Fined $100

A Cherrydale businessman, the second in two days to receive a jail sentence on a numbers charge, was convicted yesterday in Arlington County Court of operating a lottery.

Given 30 days in jail plus a $100 fine by Judge Hugh Reid was Vincent J. Cosimano, 46, operator of the Cherrydale Grille, 4032 Lee hwy., Arlington. He said he would appeal.

William Hornig, 48, operator of the Cherrydale Pool Hall, 4018 Lee hwy., was convicted Wednesday on a similar charge. He was sentenced to 30 days in jail and a $50 fine by Judge Reid,

Cosimano, who gave his address as 5413 20th ave., Annandale, Md., testified that two alleged numbers slips found in his pocket when the grill was raided October 15 were "just notes" on "personal numbers of my own."

Broaddus G. (Buck) Shreve, 3109 N. 9th st., Arlington, testified he turned over from $20 to $70 a day in numbers bets to Cosimano. Shreve is a former bartender at the grill, who was fired last month for alleged "intoxication" by Cosimano.

attorneys say they plan to file the same motions before Judge McGuire.

Five Witnesses Testify

The five witnesses who testified yesterday were:

David H. Coates, a professional photographer who said he had taken pictures of the building at 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg;

Ralph A. Yates, an employe of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. who identified the types of telephone service listed at that address;

William J. Toole, another C. & P employe who described a visit he made to that address in August, 1948.

Murray J. Olf, proprietor and sole owner of State Wide Sports News Distributors, who also was indicted by the same special gambling grand jury that indicted Lewis, and Harry I. Gilbert, representing the Western Union Telegraph Co.

Hitz "announced surprise" during his questioning of Gilbert, when, the prosecutor said, the latter failed to remember information he had previously given the Government. The information concerned markings on Western Union records subpenaed by the Government.

Tells of Leasing Tickers

Olf testified he was not only the sole owner of State Wide, but since the Government raid the sole employe.

Olf testified he leased tickers from Western Union and subleased them to subscribers. Olf said he signed a contract with Western Union, calling for installation of a ticker for "S. Stanton." The Government says "S. Stanton" is the owner of the Lewis headquarters.

Olf said he received his sports results from Howard Sports Daily, in Baltimore, over a specially built $3800 Western Union receivers, and transmitted the information to subscribers.

Olf will resume the stand Monday morning when the case will continue.

Bolivian Pilot Fights for Life

ERIK RIOS BRIDOUX
Rallies

The bodies of all but one of the 55 victims of the fatal airliner crash Tuesday have been recovered and positively identified, Eastern Air Lines reported last night.

The fifty-fourth body to be recovered was that of Jules Vogel, 42, of 80 Seaman ave., New York City. It was identified at the District Morgue.

The only body unaccounted for was that of William Smythe, 38, secretary-treasurer of the Eberhard Faber Pencil Co., of 60 Serpentine st., Rosslyn Estates, Long Island, N. Y.

Harbor police and the Alexandria Rescue Squad last night continued dragging the muddy Potomac where the plane's broken forward section plunged.

Yesterday morning the body of Gardner Taylor, 60, founder of the New York Savings & Loan Association, New York City, was recovered from the river bottom.

He was quickly identified at the District Morgue through clothing and personal papers.

The present count of 54 victims recovered and positively identified was reached yesterday after the identification of Mrs. Thelma Foster, 42, a widow, by her Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. supervisor, at the District Morgue, and Mrs. Sam Williamson, 47, of Mars Hill, Me., through personal papers, at Cunningham's Funeral Home in Alexandria.

Mrs. Williamson is survived by her husband, Joseph.

Last night Lieut. John K. Baker of the Police Homicide Squad, who has been at the Morgue throughout the grim identification ordeal, reported that bodies of all victims of the plane crash have been transferred to funeral homes.

Pilot Rallies From Setback

doux had "just about overcome the effects of last night's setback."

"Learning about the crash and deaths had a lot to do with his relapse," said the doctor, who asked that his name be withheld.

Bridoux was given a better-than-even chance—"about 60-40, I'd say"—to pull through, the doctor added. "He is a little more cheerful, but still moderately depressed."

He barred all visitors, and said probably none would be admitted today or Saturday.

Bridoux was informed of the fate of the passengers sometime after noon Wednesday, despite persistent efforts of doctors and nurses to keep him in the dark on that point.

Their fears that knowledge of the toll would cause a relapse were borne out after a visitor, as yet unidentified, made an injudicious slip of the tongue.

Ricardo Martinez-Vargas, Bolivian Ambassador to the United States, told The Washington Post last night he had "definitely established that no one connected with the Bolivian Embassy" enlightened Bridoux.

His condition was so serious late Wednesday that Dr. Guillermo Gutierrez, Bolivian ambassador to the Pan-American Union, was called to the hospital at midnight.

Bridoux had a temperature of about 105 and was suffering from cyanosis, causing his skin to turn blue from lack of oxygen, his doctor said. He was placed under an oxygen tent for six hours, but protested when it was used at intervals thereafter.

While the pilot was undergoing the dramatic relapse and recovery from it, the Civil Aeronautics Board proceeded with plans for a sweeping investigation of the crash.

Reports that the CAB was at odds with D. W. Rentzel, administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Administration for issuing a report clearing Eastern Air Lines of blame in the disaster were denied by both agencies.

A CAA official said the statement issued Wednesday was designed to show that the DC-4 was "operating according to CAA regulations" when the crash occurred. It did not infringe on the investigative and judicial duties of the CAB, the official said.

Meanwhile, divers continued to scour the Potomac River bottom for the one remaining victim. They were also searching for the wreckage of Bridoux's P-38, which crashed in the river near the forward half of the DC-4, less than 100 yards off Mount Vernon Memorial hwy. and about a mile south of National Airport.

Ban on Military Planes At Civil Fields Studied

Miami, Fla., Nov. 3. (AP)—A. B. Curry, chairman of the National Airports Advisory Committee, today said his group probably will recommend barring military airplanes from commercial air lines and from traffic patterns over commercial airports.

Curray said his committee plans a complete investigation of Tuesday's accident in Washington. A thorough study of airport congestion across the country probably will result in the recommendation against military aircraft using civilian facilities or "air," he said.

"Similar accidents to the one in Washington have almost happened a number of times over many large airports in this country," Curry said. "We're going into this more thoroughly than ever before."

Rickenbacker Urges Plane Separation

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, Eastern Air Lines president, last night expressed hope "some good . . . such as separation of commercial from military and private planes at congested airports . . . will come out of the tragic crash" of an EAL DC-4 Tuesday.

The crash at National Airport which claimed 55 lives "rocked me to my toe nails because it was beyond my control," said the World War I air ace. "I spent money like a drunken sailor on safety and educating personnel and then fate comes along to dictate this tragedy."

Rickenbacker, after addressing the Unitarian Laymen's League in All Soul's Church, 16th and Harvard st. nw., told a reporter probers have not yet been able to ascertain why the Bolivian pilot of the P-38 which crashed into the liner failed to respond to radioed instructions from the control tower.

Rickenbacker urged this country to "keep our airpower on wings but don't let us forget that we've got to have an Army too and that the Navy has done a great job in this country for over 150 years.'

America's greatest weapon, though, he said, is the pioneers' faith in hard work and spiritual awareness.

Maryland Woman And Virginia Boy Struck by Polio

Two more cases of polio were reported yesterday in nearby Maryland and Virginia. They are:

A 5-year-old boy from the 2400 block of S. 27th st., Arlington, the county's twenty-fourth case this year, who was admitted to Children's Hospital, and a 21-year-old woman from the 11700 block of Kingtree st., Silver Spring, admitted to Gallinger Hospital, Montgomery County's thirty-third case this year.

Washington has had 94 cases this year; Prince Georges County, 51; Fairfax County, 16, and Alexandria, 8.

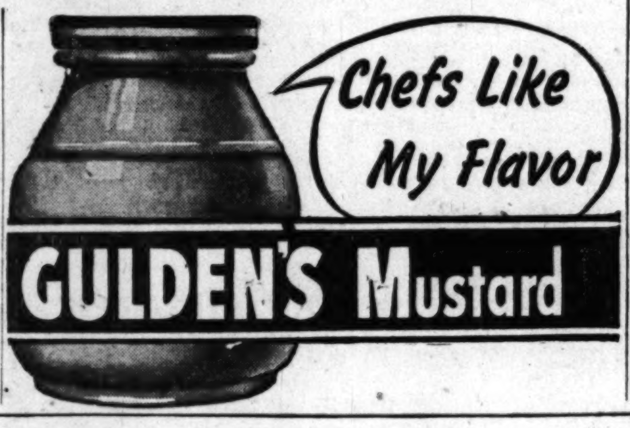
Calls U. S. Aide Author of Lie

Moscow, Nov. 3 (U.P.)—The political weekly, New Times, attacked George Morgan, first secretary of the American Embassy, today as guilty of falsification, slander and warmongering.

Morgan, the New Times said, wrote an article in the American magazine Foreign Affairs under the pen name of "Historicus."

The writer of the New Times article, N. Leonidov, called a deliberate and wanton distortion of the truth a citation that he said Morgan made in the Foreign Affairs article implying that Premier Josef Stalin believes the existence of both capitalistic and Communist systems is impossible, and hence that war is inevitable.

The New Times said the article attributed to Morgan, and another months ago in Foreign Affairs and signed "Mr. X" were part of an attempt by the State Department to cover up aggressive American policy and shift the blame onto Russia.



TV Pioneer Discounts Color Possibility in Near Future

By the United Press

Dr. Allen B. Du Mont, television pioneer, said yesterday that talk of color TV being ready now is "just fooling the public."

He told a Federal Communications Commission hearing it may be another 10 to 20 years before there can be a Nation-wide system of color video as good as the present black-and-white systems.

Du Mont, a TV manufacturer and broadcaster, said none of three color TV systems now under study is ready for the public. He referred to color systems of the Radio Corporation of America, the Columbia Broadcasting System, and Color Television, Inc., of San Francisco.

He said FCC, in considering adoption of color TV standards at this time, "is asking the industry to do something it is not ready to do."

"I do not believe any of the manufacturers think that color television has been sufficiently developed, nor have they asked for a hearing," he said, "nor do I believe that any of the color television broadcasters believe that color television is ready, nor have they requested a hearing."

He said there is no justification for the feeling that TV manufacturers and broadcasters have been holding back color television "for their own selfish interests."

Plane Trouble Causes Alarm in Salisbury

Miami, Fla., Nov. 3 (AP).—A smoking cockpit heater aboard a South American transport plane caused an alarm at Salisbury, Md., today but the crew quickly ended the trouble.

The plane, an Avianca (Aerovias Nacionales de Colombia) DC-4, arrived at Miami without difficulty at 7:12 a. m. (EST), and departed for Bogota, Colombia, via Barranquilla, at 9:20 a. m.

League Opposes Vote Amendment

The Arlington Better Government League yesterday declared itself against the proposed Campbell suffrage amendment to the Virginia Constitution, which will be voted upon November 8.

"The league has always opposed the poll tax and other unnecessary restrictions on the right to vote. However, after careful study . . . the league is of the opinion that the present poll tax requirement would be the lesser of two evils," Harley Wiliams, league president, said yesterday.

Use of Preventive TB Vaccine Urged

Potential cases of tuberculosis can be prevented by 80 percent with the use of the BCG vaccine, yet this country has generally ignored it, Dr. Konrad Birkhaug declared yesterday.

A research associate for the New York Health Department, Dr. Birkhaug told the Metropolitan Washington Tuberculosis Conference that his statement represented a consensus of world opinions.

"The vaccine, since its discovery more than 25 years ago, has been administered to more than 40 million persons. It has proved effective as a preventative, yet harmless," he stated.

Of the 40 million persons given the vaccine, however, only a few have been in the United States. They include some Indians and about 10,000 persons in New York State where a BCG laboratory was established several years ago and is headed by Dr. Birkhaug.

"The doctors here wish to continue treatment of the disease rather than to prevent it," Dr. Birkhaug said. He pointed out that in the last two years, the National Tuberculosis Association has spent $4,900,000 for streptomycin, a drug used in the treatment of tuberculosis, but less than $100,000 for BCG, the preventative vaccine.

"It is the duty of the medical profession to exhaust the possibilities of any preventative measure to the utmost. Any measure like BCG needs careful consideration," he declared.

Dr. Birkhaug said the 10,000 persons given the vaccine in New York were doctors, nurses, medical students and those persons whose relatives had tuberculosis. He added the vaccine is now available in Chicago, Philadelphia and Washington, but that there is still much opposition to it here.

Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the Health Department's Bureau for Tuberculosis, said he felt the vaccine should be given here but only if the Health Department can provide the personnel to see that it is done properly.

The conference, sponsored by the Tuberculosis Associations of the District, Maryland and Virginia, is held twice a year. New officers elected yesterday were: Dr. Charles P. Cake, Arlington physician, president; James R. Laurey, professor of thoracic surgery at Howard University, vice-president; Rebecca Sweeney, director of personal information service, District Tuberculosis Assn., secretary; and Dr. James J. Feffer, Washington physician, Dr. Walter J. Nalls, Alexandria physician, and Harold McGee, of the Virginia State Tuberculosis Assn., members of the executive committee.

Dr. Seckinger Sworn In as Health Chief

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger was sworn in to succeed Dr. George C. Ruhland as District Health Officer yesterday in a ceremony at the District Building.

More than 50 city officials including Dr. Ruhland crowded into Commissioner John Russell Young's office to watch Seckinger take the oath of office.

Young praised both Ruhland and Seckinger, and stated that Seckinger's appointment followed the District's policy of filling vacancies by promotion wherever possible rather than by outside appointment. Seckinger had been Ruhland's assistant for 14 years before Ruhland retired September 30.

When Young asked Seckinger if he wanted to make any remarks, Mrs. Seckinger stepped up to kiss her husband and advised him, "Don't say anything!" The new health officer said he was "grateful to the Commissioners for their confidence" and then shook hands all around.

After the ceremony Seckinger told reporters he hadn't given any thought to a recommendation of his successor as assistant health officer, but said he favored the policy of promotion within the department.

He also said he plans no changes in personnel.

The Gallup Poll

Fair Deal Health Plan Given Heavy Vote by Lehman Backer

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 3.—An interesting political paradox involving the socialized medicine issue has arisen in the New York senatorial race, an election that President Truman has said he regards as a test of the Administration's Fair Deal program.

Herbert H. Lehman, the Democratic candidate, has come out against the Truman Administration's compulsory health insurance bill, proposing instead Federal aid for a voluntary program. This is the one major departure in Lehman's platform from the Truman Fair Deal line.

But it turns out that people who express a preference for Lehman are overwhelmingly in favor of the Truman compulsory health program.

The studies show the following division of opinion on compulsory health insurance among voters preferring Lehman and those preferring the Republican candidate, John Foster Dulles, who has come out strongly against the administration's health plan:

"Do you think the U. S. Congress should or should not pass the Government's compulsory health insuracnce program, which would require wage (salary) deductions from all employed persons to provide medical and hospital care for them and their families?"

	Should	Should Not	No Opin.
Total Sample	51%	37%	12%
Prefer Lehman	62	27	11
Prefer Dulles	32	57	11
Not registered or not planning to vote	53	31	16

A victory for either Lehman, who refused to indorse the administration measure, or for Dulles, who opposed it, would not mean that New York State citizens are against the compulsory plan.

Parking Lot Cost In Clarendon Put at $17,000

Making a 100-car parking lot out of a strip of land on Fairfax drive, in Clarendon, will cost an estimated $17,000, Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg said yesterday.

He will make a complete report on the proposed parking area, to relieve crowding in the business area, at the county board meeting this Saturday. The strip of land in question stretches from Clarendon Circle west to 10th st. extended, and lies between two lanes of Fairfax drive.

Grading, surfacing, and installation of a storm sewer are included in the total figure, Lundberg said.

Cord-Chewing Is 'Short Rations,' Child Finds

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 3 (U.P.)—One-year-old David Terruli was in Genesee Hospital today with an extremely sore mouth. But it could have been worse.

David chewed apart a live electric cord in his home yesterday. A short circuit resulted, and the inside of the child's mouth was burned. Hospital attendants said he would be released after a few days.

Erik Jensen, Danish commercial attache, was incorrectly identified as Povl Bang-Jensen in a story Thursday about the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church vote to extend a call to the Rev. George M. Docherty, of Aberdeen, Scotland. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Pickup, Discharge Bus Service Pushed

Recommendation that the Oriole Motor Coach Lines, Inc., be permitted to pick up and discharge passengers between its District Line terminal and points beyond the Silver Spring business district was made yesterday by a joint board of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

At present the transport company offers express service and is barred from discharging passengers boarding buses at the Georgia and Alaska aves. nw. terminal before reaching Georgia ave. and Forest Glen rd. or Old Bladensburg and Colesville rds. Returning, it may not pick up passengers inside these limits.

Still Need Approval

The recommendations, made by Fred Sager of the District Public Utilities Commission and Joseph S. A. Giardina of the Maryland Public Service Commission, must still be approved by the full Interstate Commerce Commission.

The Capital Transit, operators of competing bus service in the area who opposed the petition of the Oriole Lines, have until November 22 to file exceptions to the findings of the joint board.

If the recommendations are approved, the next step by the Oriole Lines, according to Manuel J. Davis, general counsel, will be to apply to the Public Service Commission for the right to make unrestricted pickups and discharges of passengers over the intra-State portion of the presently restricted area.

Vigorously Supported

The petition of the Oriole Lines, filed June 27, has been vigorously supported by civic and trade groups of the Silver Spring area. These groups have campaigned many times for improvements in the service offered by the competing Capital Transit Co.

'Didn't Beat Her'

Wickes Says Wife's Story Is Not True

Robert Boal Wickes denied yesterday in District Court that he makes more than $50,000 a year and beats his wife, as she has charged.

Mrs. Helen Arleene Wickes, his wife, accused Wickes of assaulting her and then forcing her onto a plane to America from their home in Buenos Aires. Her family home is in Providence, R. I.

She wants custody of their 2-year-old child, $2000 a month alimony, and a court declaration that her husband wronged her.

Wickes, of Mount Vernon, Va., in an answer to his wife's suit, said the courts here lack jurisdiction over a matrimonial dispute brought by a citizen of Rhode Island against a citizen of Virginia in a case like this.

His answer, filed through attorneys Leslie C. Garnett and Samuel F. Beach, said Mrs. Wickes left Argentina on her own accord.

He does not give his financial status but denies he is a man of "great wealth" as charged by his wife, and that he has "bad habits."

The document said he has asked Mrs. Wickes to return to him and states he does not feel that her Providence home, a "flat without any heat or hot water," is fit for his wife and child.

Two Get Six Months for Card Fleece

A pair of Washington men who allegedly fleeced a group of laborers in an "unbeatable" game of three-car monte were given six months to ponder over their gambling successes in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday.

Identical terms in the Maryland House of Correction were meted out by Judge Alan Bowie to Leonard E. Coleman, 49, 1807 California st. nw., and John D. Lynch, 56, 1306 Euclid st., after police testified they won more than $70 in a game on a Hyattsville construction project Wednesday. Detective Earle Huber, who arrested them after breaking up the game, said one of their victims was a 17-year-old youth who lost $40.

Judge Bowie imposed the prison terms after studying the defendants' police records which showed that both have served time in prison for various offenses.

Detective Huber said the two men's operations were similar to those of a ring which is known to have flim-flammed laborers out of hundreds of dollars in "fixed" card games in the past several months.

Wife, Baby Strangler, Now Ruled Sane

Herbert D. Alexander, 24-year-old Navy veteran who strangled his wife and baby daughter in Alexandria in October, 1948, has been adjudged "not now insane" and able to stand trial.

This was announced yesterday by Judge James R. Duncan of Alexandria Civil and Police Court, who has ordered the youth returned from the Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va. He will probably arrive in Alexandria today and be held in jail pending a preliminary hearing Saturday.

Committed Year Ago

Judge Duncan had him committed to the institution a year ago, for "observation and treatment" on opinion of a panel of three Alexandria physicians that he was insane at that time and apparently at the time of the alleged offense.

Judge Duncan disclosed he had received a letter from Dr. Joseph R. Blalock, superintendent of the hospital which said that Alexander is "not no winsane and has not been insane or psychotic" since his admission to the institution.

"He is an inadequate type of individual who shows a clinical picture of psychoneurosis," Dr. Blalock wrote. "His mental condition is such that he is capable of standing trial and testifying in his own behalf."

Faces Two Indictments

Alexander faces two murder indictments in the strangulation deaths of his wife, Gloria, then 21, and their 18 months old daughter, Bonnie. The deaths occurred in their apartment at the Beverly Plaza Apartments, 3908 Ebert ave., Alexandria. Alexander telephoned police and said "Come and get me. I've killed my wife and baby."

When officers arrived, they found that Alexander had slashed his wrists and elbows with a razor blade, but the wounds were not serious. Afterward, in jail, he told relatives, "I don't know why I did it. I don't want to talk about it."

Judge Duncan declined to predict yesterday what the action will be in Alexander's case, in advance of the preliminary hearing at which he will preside. Because of the commitment last year to the hospital, Alexander has not passed out of Judge Duncan's jurisdiction, though he has been indicted. Usual procedure in such cases in the past has been for the Civil and Police Court Judge to hold the person for trial in Corporation Court.

'Student' Gives Steps to Status Of Ace Yegg

St. Louis, Nov. 3 (AP).—Jack Doyle, 24, told police today he wanted to learn a trade on his release from the Missouri Penitentiary last May and so he studied hard. At safecracking.

Doyle said he wanted to become an expert. Police admit he did. They credit him with some 35 jobs in the St. Louis area.

How does one learn the safecracking business?

Well, Doyle said he first studied plans and specifications for strong boxes at the United States Patent Office in Washington. He took notes and memorized details.

After that, he posed as a businessman and took "refresher courses" from safe manufacturers.

Feeling his "education" still incomplete, he studied law. He said that among other things he learned that a safecracker who uses explosives gets a stiffer penalty than one who doesn't.

Doyle said he adopted the "peeling" technique — removal of the steel plates with a crowbar, one at a time.

Teaming up with a couple of other former convicts, Doyle launched his "career" last July, police reported. They said that on the 4th of July he bought an automobile here for $1500, then slipped into the garage during the night and got his money back.

Contrary to Forecasts, 1949 May Provide U. S. Homebuilding Record, Foley Declares

Contrary to early predictions, 1949 may well be the record homebuilding year of our history, Administrator Raymond M. Foley of the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency said yesterday.

He credited the "excellent prospects" for such a record to a two-month industry and Government campaign to cut the cost of building homes.

Foley was addressing the final session of the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Building Officials Conference of America and the Building Officials Foundation at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The housing official said that at the beginning of this year, there was grave danger that home building would drop because housing prices were getting higher than people could afford or were willing to pay.

"Effects of Teamwork"

Government housing leaders and the building industry set out to develop all possible means of bringing down the cost of housing, Foley said. Meetings were held throughout the country on ways of cutting costs, and the Government shaped its policies to help the program.

Following a slow start in the spring, he said, "the effects of this teamwork began to be seen." There was a mounting volume of rental and lower-priced sale housing, and with it a reversal of the usual seasonal trend in home building as it continued to rise through the summer to record heights in September, Foley said.

The housing official assured the builders that "fears of Federal domination" of the building industry and threats to private enterprise are "unfounded."

Better Fire Protection Sought

James K. McElroy, assistant technical secretary of the National Fire Protective Association, urged the builders to set up a coordinating agency with the NFPA on enforcement of building safety rules to protect life and property.

A proposal to set up such a liaison group was approved by the builders, who also will appoint a committee to discuss with Administrator Foley the general administration of building laws.

Joseph P. Wolff, commissioner of the Department of Building and Safety Engineering of Detroit, was elected chairman of the Building Officials Foundation.

British Report On Homosexuality May Be Made

London, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Britain's Labor government may sponsor a sort of "Kinsey Report" of its own to determine whether homosexuality in Britain is increasing, Home Secretary Chuter Ede indicated to the House of Commons today.

Brig. Frank Medlicott, Liberal National, asked Ede whether he thought the laws on homosexuality "needed to be looked into" in view of a reported increase.

"The problem has been present to my mind for some time," Ede replied, "and I am now considering whether it is necessary to make any formal inquiries into the growth of these practices."

Paris, Nov. 3 (NYHT).—The foreign ministers of Sweden, Norway and Denmark called today on W. Averell Harriman, roving Marshall Plan ambassador, to tell him their countries had decided to work toward a Scandinavian economic union, according to an official of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

They were quoted as saying that they aimed at a Scandinavian customs union, at the progressive elimination of quantitative restrictions within the area, and the creation of a free market in Scandinavia.

Virginia Booby Trap

Under the protective covering of a constitutional amendment to repeal the poll tax, an ugly pitfall has been prepared for Virginia voters in the general election next Tuesday. The danger in the so-called Campbell amendment to the State constitution is that, although it would do away with the capitation tax as a prerequisite for voting, it would itself entail deterrents to voting and, in addition, would leave the Legislature free to impose other restraints. An anomalous situation has resulted in which former supporters of the poll tax are now arguing for repeal, whereas persons who for many years have sought to wipe the poll tax off the books have denounced the amendment as a trick.

One of the gimmicks in the Campbell amendment is a requirement for annual registration of voters. Virginia now has permanent registration, and most authorities on voting laws recommended this as the ideal system. There is nothing in the amendment to prevent the Legislature from loading the registration requirement with all sorts of restrictions in the name of safeguards against fraudulent voting.

Similarly, the amendment would write into the State constitution a provision closing voting lists 120 days before elections—at a time when issues would not yet be clearly defined and interest would be low. Registration books are now closed 30 days before elections. The amendment would permit tests for literacy "and such further requirements as the General Assembly may provide"—an old device for controlling registration. Finally, in lieu of the present capitation tax, which goes to schools, the amendment would allow the General Assembly to levy a new capitation tax of up to $3 on adults and would permit communities, with the assent of the Legislature, to levy an additional $1 tax. The net of these provisions might be to impose a far more onerous burden than the poll tax now involves.

All in all, the Campbell amendment seems to us to lend itself to a discouragement rather than an encouragement of voting. The tipoff is in the attitude of the Byrd organization. When a machine which has thrived on low registrations and small voter turnout suddenly comes out for a move ostensibly designed to facilitate greater participation at the polls, it is time to smell a rat. As the Richmond News Leader has remarked, the language of the amendment "has a lean and hungry look, and we trust it not." This does not mean that repeal of the Virginia poll tax is any less desirable than ever. But when voters consider this important question, it ought to be presented honestly on its merits and not as a piece of candy-coated deception.

Minnesota's Day

It appears that felicitations are in order this morning to the Governor and citizens of the sovereign State of Minnesota, who with the aid of President Truman and other visiting celebrities, are celebrating a round hundred years of corporate existence. Minnesota, to be sure, has been where it is for considerably longer than that. We are informed by the encyclopedia, for example, that the famous Granite Falls of the Minnesota River is a relic of the Archean, or most ancient, geologic age, and Taylors Falls on the St. Croix and Kettle Rivers go back, beyond the memory of the oldest inhabitant, to early Paleozoic times. But if you want to know any more about that sort of thing, you had better look it up for yourself at the public library.

What the Minnesotans are celebrating today is the centennial of the creation of the Minnesota Territory and the nomination of Alexander Ramsay as first Territorial Governor. The new Territory was formed in part from some of the old Northwest Territory and in part from lands acquired in the Louisiana Purchase. The latter portion, however, was still under the control of various Indian tribes, and in the other, or eastern, portion the white population consisted largely of trappers and lumberjacks, many of them of French-Canadian stock.

But Minnesota was already celebrated in legend. It was the habitat, you remember, of our old school chum, Hiawatha. It seems to have been an early stamping ground of Paul Bunyan, the lumbering hero. In more recent times it has been the scene of the splendors and sorrows of the characters in the novels of Mr. Sinclair Lewis, and it is also the native place of many historical heroes, including Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. It has probably more nicknames than any other State, testifying to the varied interests and activities of its inhabitants. The name itself has been poetically and some say inaccurately, translated as "land of the sky blue water"; anyhow, the water is said to cover more than 3000 square miles. It is the home of the Mayo Clinic and of more specimens of pure Nordic humanity than could be found in Germany at the height of Hitler's power. All in all, quite a place, this Minnesota.

Asia's Revolt

Secretary Acheson showed a sense of history as well as politics in the way he extended a welcome to the new Republic of United Indonesia. His good will should find an echo in all Americans who treasure the revolutionary beginnings of America. Of late the revolutionary blood in America seems to have been thinned by fears that all revolution and even all reform is Communist. Asia has felt the impact of these fears. They have been expressed in pro-aid appeals for every hole and corner in Asia where feudalism and reaction are in hiding. Anything to save the status quo! From Americans such an attitude is treason to their very marrow. It is all the more incomprehensible because Asia is simply going through the same ferment that brought forth a free America—not to say, a free England, a free France, and a free Netherlands.

There are two kinds of revolutions which the myopia about Asia fails to differentiate. One is simply a seizure of power in a country where all the rights of petition and redress are constitutionally available. This is the kind that no ordered society can tolerate. It is merely an extension of personal thievery. Direct action can never be allowed to take the place of the appeal at hand in the institutions of representative government. The other kind of revolution is the throwing off of a despotic or an alien rule, and, if this did not find a welcome in the United States we could put down our country not only as a sufferer from arteriosclerosis, but also as self-defeatist. Surely there are quite a few countries that we want to do this very thing!

So the new independence of the Indonesians is something to applaud. Here is another indication that a new Asia is in process of birth—perhaps the most historical phenomenon in modern history. Half of the human race are on the thorny march to freedom. The march has been nourished on those same pronunciamentos which attended the revolutionary struggles in Europe and America. Those struggles passed Asia by. But nobody knew the dynamite train he was laying better than Macaulay when he started popular education in India. This opened to Asia a storehouse of such texts on freedom as the Declaration of Independence and the Dutch Abjuration. An added influence, perhaps the decisive element, was the spectacle of the humiliation which the white man has suffered in Asia. Asia after the First World War had seen British turn on Germans, then White Russians reduced to coolie employment, and after the Second World War Asia had witnessed the Japanese throw the white man into concentration camps in his own dominions. There was no "face" left for any perpetuation of the imperial role in a colonial system.

The revolt of Asia calls for a fine discrimination in the handling of it. Nationalists have been turned into Communists by Western blundering. There should also be sympathy as well as discrimination. Many pitfalls are ahead of the Asiatic nationalists—their equivalent of our own Shays' and Whisky rebellions, rebellions that will challenge the true revolution. There will be the competition of communism. But the movement, as Secretary Acheson says, is "genuine," and only the squint-eyed in mind will think of it as Muscovite. It is something more momentous than ever came out of Moscow.

After The Crash

With the condition of the Bolivian pilot involved in Tuesday's air tragedy becoming more critical, it is possible that a full explanation of exactly what happened may never be available. To be sure, Civil Aeronautics Board investigators were on the scene shortly after the collision between the Bolivian P-38 and an Eastern Air Lines transport. The immediacy of the investigation, plus statements from numerous witnesses, may help the CAB decide why the Bolivian pilot did not respond to warnings. But most hypotheses are likely to lead to one blunt conclusion: human error.

Human error is never wholly preventable, but the areas in which error can operate can be limited. The loss of 55 lives is ample reason to take drastic steps to prevent repetition of this type of accident. The fact that it happened in good weather under seemingly normal conditions is itself evidence that safety precautions do not go far enough.

One salutary result of the tragedy is to bring a congressional demand for stricter rules governing segregation of commercial and noncommercial traffic. This in turn ought to induce the Civil Aeronautics Administration to act where heretofore it has hesitated. At the outset, use of highly congested airports such as the National ought to be limited to point-to-point operation, which would rule out test flights like that of the Bolivian plane.

Likewise, we believe, military-type planes ought to use military airports. It is temporizing to say that the Bolivian P-38 technically was classified as a commercial plane, for it had military characteristics. One of the big factors here is the difference in speed between commercial planes and most military planes.

In yet another sphere, the accident demonstrates the necessity for keeping tape recordings of all radio conversations at control towers. Such recordings are now kept at the National Airport on regular commercial frequencies, but no record is maintained on the frequencies used for close-in and military operations. Possibly, since tower operators already have plenty to do, this means that there ought to be additional personnel at busier airports.

The banning of noncommercial flights from airports such as the National would probably bring cries of "discrimination," since Federal airways are maintained for the benefit of private as well as commercial users. The answer, it seems to us, is that there must be more airports in congested areas like Washington, or possibly Federal support for private fields to be used for certain types of traffic. Commercial flights involve the most lives, and that ought to be the deciding criterion. Eastern Air Lines, which otherwise has a good safety record, has twice fallen victim to improper practices by outside pilots. If the segregation of commercial and noncommercial traffic would mean that the airlines must pay more of the cost of operating the airports, that still would be cheaper than more human tragedy and loss of traffic resulting from preventable accidents.

In The Red

Last January the President forecast a budget deficit of approximately 900 million dollars. Revised estimates just released by the Budget Bureau put expenditures 1.6 billion dollars higher and reduce estimated receipts by 3 billion dollars, raising the anticipated deficit to 5.5 billion dollars. That is the second largest peacetime deficit in our history, being exceeded only in 1941 when the country was on the verge of war and expanding its defense outlays.

More perturbing than the size of the deficit, however, is the steady rise of expenditures and the large proportion of expenditures resulting from defense outlays, foreign aid, interest on the public debt, and veterans' services and benefits. The first two items cannot be reduced substantially without impairing national security and jeopardizing our efforts to rehabilitate war-shattered nations. And interest on the public debt is a fixed charge that depends upon the size of the debt, while veterans' benefits are likewise fixed commitments, although a recent limited increase in outlays for pensions resulted from liberalizing legislation.

On the whole, the increases in expenditures over January legislation, says the Budget Bureau, are governed by the conditions set by authorizing legislation and economic factors rather than by appropriations limitations. In other words, the expanding scale of expenditures is largely the result of policies approved by Congress and accepted by the President or outlays made necessary by changing economic conditions. Consequently, there is little scope for substantial economy unless Congress is prepared to modify spending programs in order to curtail the scope of Government activities. From present indications the trend is all in the opposite direction.

Some reduction in expenses will be possible through reorganization of the executive establishments. But the signal failure of the congressional economy bloc to effect over-all cuts in outlays testifies to the near impossibility of effective retrenchment under present conditions.

The question of what to do will have to be faced at the next session by Congress. For it can no longer close its eyes to the fact that, in a year of prosperity, deficits have again become the order of the day. If the gap between outgo and income is too great to be closed by cuts in expenditures, the alternative is an increase in taxes, or willingness to face the prospect of continuing deficits that will add to the size of the public debt and increase the volume of unmanageable fixed charges. Which is it to be?

There are some apologists for deficit financing who assert that prosperity and full employment can only be maintained by the Government's spending more than it takes in and supplying additional money with which to stimulate business activity. The objection to this solution of the Government's fiscal problems is that it fails to allow for the demoralizing inflationary effect of chronic deficit financing and the loss of confidence in the credit of a Government that does not pay its way even when the going is good.

The Army Recants

It did not take Secretary Gray long to act on the restrictive order which contradicted the Army's declared racial policy. Mr. Gray rescinded the order yesterday, but, more than that, he gave a forthright statement which further implements the announced policy. No qualified individual, he asserts, will be denied a chance to practice his specialty because of race or color, and qualified Negroes will be granted equal opportunity if vacancies exist for their specialties. Moreover, although separate Negro units still will not be dispersed, qualified Negroes will be assigned to some white units. This is welcome reassurance, and the unmistakable tone of the directive ought to be taken to heart by those responsible for what can only charitably be described as a "mistake." Secretary Gray is to be commended for his candor and adherence to principle.

HORIZON

The empty road companioned field on field;
The moon
Leaped from the hills of dusk to plains of sky.
Far across the reedy marsh a loon
Breathed his sharp evening sigh.
And out upon this wide grey disk,
Under the rounding lid,
I said I would ride the narrowing road
Out to the end. I did.
But the lid swung down before me then,
And I traveled the same road back again.

Griffith's Impropriety

With regard to Admiral Denfeld's dismissal, an item reported in the October 27 papers which I feel should not go unnoticed is the impropriety of certain remarks made by Assistant Secretary of Defense Paul Griffith during a talk at the Chevy Chase Community Center. In view of his position, Colonel Griffith's remarks constituted a semiofficial announcement of Admiral Denfeld's impending dismissal nearly 24 hours before the President made his announcement.

The claim that Admiral Sherman and many others were prevented from testifying in disagreement with those naval officers who spoke is ridiculous. Mr. Matthews could easily have informed Mr. Vinson if such was the case. Colonel Griffith's backing will only serve to make it more difficult for Admiral Sherman to command the respect and loyalty of the men under him. Surely it must be obvious by this time, even to the most gullible, that this is not just a matter of a few disloyal men making trouble.

Colonel Griffith's remarks to the effect that only the Army has lost anything under unification (its Air Corps) and his references to the Navy's differences with its Marine Corps and its Bureau of Yards and Docks serve only to underline the irony of the Navy position today. The service which has proven it understands unification and how to make it work, which settled its internal differences and produced the closely integrated and well coordinated team that operated so effectively during the war, finds itself outvoted by the two services which couldn't work together as one. The paradox of making three services of two and calling it "unification" will never cease to amaze me. MARY RULE.

Greece's Aims

It was hardly necessary for the "acting director, Greek government office of information," Anthony Antonakakis (letter published October 31) to identify himself as acting for the present Greek government in distorting the realities as to the aims of Greece.

It is true that in the Second World War Greece was fighting at the side of the "Western democracies," but so was Russia. Both were fighting for self preservation with little if any regard for democracy.

After the Second World War there was as much democracy in Russia as there was in Greece as we know democracy. Greece followed in the steps of Hitler, maintained a secret police, concentration camps, liquidated political enemies of the ruling regime and defied all principles of self-government of the people. That has continued insofar as our representatives have not been able to suppress policies adopted by the royal regime, the King being merely a puppet in the control of the old aristocracy.

It is by no means clear that Greece will greatly improve so long as the present notoriously corrupt and inefficient regime continues in control of Greece. With our aid, not by themselves, have the Greek rulers been able to any degree to restore peace among the people of that nation. The cry that internal strife was solely due to the activities of Communists in Greece has been too much due to the financial assistance which the Greek government has learned it might on that plea secure from us.

Beware of the Greek seeking gifts who professes to look "for continuing cooperation with all the democratic peoples of the world, but especially to ever-strengthening ties of understanding and friendship with that greatest democracy of all, the United States of America." HUBERT E. PAGE,

Chevy Chase.

Conserving Atoms

There must be more than one person in the United States of the opinion that we should conserve for the indefinite future—instead of exploiting in present-day use for less vital needs—our resources for atomic energy, that we should confine our use of these resources to research and nothing else.

It would seem a worthwhile chance to take in presuming that man of the future can learn to use fission as an adequate substitute in every way for the daily radiations received from the sun. Then, once man has finally reached the limits of his capacity to make use of sun radiations, he can split up the atoms of the earth for the needed energy obtained thereby.

The course for us to take today should be plain. We can either offer a chance for life to more people in the remote future or needlessly waste their possible source of sustenance now, when we have already an at least adequate standard of living potential.

There may also be many who feel we should not destroy the matter of the earth for its energy components under any circumstances. Also, by adopting such a conservation policy, we might incidentally thereby solve at least some of our domestic and international problems. STUDENT.

Farm Discrimination

Wake up, taxpayers! The United States already owns: 4 million bales of cotton; 59 million pounds of dried eggs—nine years supply stored in caves; 15,500,000 pounds of cheese; 250 million pounds of dried skim milk; 4,700,000 bags of red kidney beans; 62 million pounds of butter stored in the United States; so much wheat it uses 48 reserve fleet ships as floating elevators; so much corn there is no storage space available so it is giving the farmers money to build corn cribs on their farms.

New plans call for paying $80 per ton for wine and raisins and feeding it to the hogs; plus many other commodities.

Your Congressmen have just passed a new farm bill providing for even higher support prices for all the above named commodities, plus many others including honey, wool, mohair, cottonseed, hogs, etc.

These programs are costing the taxpayers billions of dollars and keeping prices of food and clothing at exorbitant levels. It is not only unfair, but should be unconstitutional for this Administration to take money from one group of citizens and give it to another group. THOMAS F. LOOP.

Way to Dictatorship

While the editorial writers of many sections of the country are beating their breasts over what they represent as the "Navy's repudiation of civilian control," I'd like to call to their attention historical facts. In Germany, Italy and presently Russia where dictatorships have been successful, the dictators were not military men. Complete and unquestioned control of the military has the first prerequisite for success. Purges were the accepted formula for achieving such "loyalty." In each case a hard ruthless, ambitious man aided by civilian henchmen and assisted by a few self-seeking military supporters, turned the trick. PATRICK THOMPSON.

"Unification's Sinews"

In your October 29 editorial, "Unification's Sinews," you state . . . "It is unfortunate that the Air Force, Army and Defense Department had only one week together in which to rebut the charges made at considerable length by the Navy . . . as a result the answers were less specific than might be desired."

I agree the answers were a great deal less specific than might be desired. I cannot agree, however, that shortage of time was responsible for this failure to be more explicit. Since, as you point out, this combined testimony was in rebuttal, much of the pertinent data should already have been assembled—unless, of course, the Navy's charges showed some deviation, in actual practice, from previous testimony presented at various times by the Air Force, Army, Defense Department team. In that case, one week would indeed be insufficient to develop defensive tactics that would nullify these hard-hitting, effective, and specific Navy thrusts and still remain within the realm of fact.

Possibly something of this sort did occur since the rebuttal testimony, up to and including General Bradley's, closely followed the thesis than an "offense is the best defense." Something, however, happened to the offensive because subsequent testimony offered by Generals Collins and Clark was almost conciliatory. Was it, perhaps, the realization that, lacking live ammunition, no offensive can be successful, regardless of how strong the desire to be offensive may be?

Even though pressed for time, General Bradley managed to prepare the longest testimony submitted—testimony that completely annihilated any lingering doubts some of us might have had concerning the future of our "Fancy Dan" Navy and honored, but limited in future usefulness, Marine Corps. Refusal of the Navy to accept the concept of sea power held by the majority of the Joint Chiefs and Defense Secretary, all non-Navy men, was called "undermining unification" and "opposition to civilian control." Concern, or "lowered morale," because of drastic and arbitrary cuts was attributed to "poor leadership."

The Air Force, because of security reasons and incomplete B-36 tests, was unable to offer any concrete evidence to substantiate its oft-reiterated faith. It had some difficulty remembering certain dates relative to Joint Chiefs of Staff approval of B-36 procurement, also.

Mr. Robert Heller, chairman of the Management Advisory Board recently set up by Mr. Johnson to expedite the "phasing down" process, informed the committee that he was in complete accord with Mr. Johnson and considered his objectives to be sound and also, I assume, his tactics. After some intensive questioning, Mr. Heller finally admitted he was not qualified to present this testimony. This, along with many instances where statements, presented as facts, and subsequently shown to be either distortions of facts, half facts, or out and out misstatements, never reached the press.

It would be interesting to learn, also, if you think lack of time was responsible for Admiral Denfeld learning via the press that he had been fired?

Russian Cold War Strategy

By Marquis Childs

Gold And Atoms

FRANKFURT, Germany.—While no one outside the 14 men who comprise the Politburo in Moscow can make any positive statement about Russian policy, the following is, I believe, a new and important indicator of Soviet intentions. It has been checked and rechecked in several capitals with sources close to the confidential reporting from behind the wall of Russian secrecy.

Such cold-war tactics as the establishment of the East German state are obvious enough. But back of these day-to-day headline tactics is a long-range strategy to overcome the United States by methods short of a shooting war. This strategy has two major objectives.

One is to flood the West with massive quantities of gold mined by slave labor. The idea is to undermine the value of America's vast gold hoard at Fort Knox and thereby to spread financial and economic chaos.

The Russians have recently made major new gold discoveries in the Siberian Arctic. They may be even more important than any of the gold finds of the past decade that have been exploited by forced labor. The exploitation of the new finds is to be on a scale far greater than ever before.

In Siberian gold mines worked by forced labor an estimated 100,000 slaves have died and been replaced, according to those—and they are very few—who have escaped. Thousands of additional recruits are now being sought and it is believed that the wholesale arrests in the Czech purges will provide raw material for the secret police charged with the task of shipping an ever-increasing number of carloads of human beings to the gold mines.

FROM TIME to time in the past Soviet couriers and even Russian diplomats have been exposed smuggling gold through diplomatic channels. The gold was presumably being supplied to Communist agents abroad. In massive amounts from the mines now being opened, it would have the more ambitious objective of knocking the props out from under the American financial system.

The second objective of the Soviets' strategy is even more ambitious and far-reaching. The goal is to create a chain of atomic power stations stretching across the Soviet Union and linked together in a great power grid.

Russian planners believe that this will produce by far the cheapest power in the world. It will, therefore, put Russian industry in a position of tremendous advantage to outproduce the rest of the world. Russian scientists, working with German physicists and chemists brought to the Soviet Union at the end of the war, believe that Russian atomic development has reached a stage at which such a chain of power stations can be seriously planned.

Since Russia has no major electric power grid system and only limited petroleum resources, there is no possibility of economic loss through duplication. Such a chain of peacetime power stations would also have an enormous war potential.

THE CONTRAST with America is striking. In the United States the tendency is to play down the possible peacetime use of atomic power and to insist that such a use can come into being only in the remote future, if at all. Electric utility interests are naturally concerned lest cheap atomic power should supersede a vast investment.

One of the reasons the Russians have continued to oppose any form of inspection in the United Nations discussions of the control of atomic energy is because of their plans for an atomic power system. Under inspection the location of each atomic plant would be known to the West and would become a target in the event of war.

Named to direct Russia's long-range cold-war strategy is Bela Varga, the brilliant Hungarian-born economist and planner. Varga was in disgrace for a time because he ventured to predict that America would not undergo an immediate postwar depression. This was directly contrary to Communist doctrine at the time.

Varga went down on his knees before supreme authority. Moreover, he was proved right in his analysis. Therefore, according to these reports, he has been raised up again and given one of the most important assignments in the Soviet Union.

In effect, his immediate job is to help bring about a depression in America. Since his earliest youth, Varga has been a Communist revolutionary, participating in the Bela Kun revolt which succeeded briefly after World War I. Success, even approximate success, in his new undertaking would put him in a position of extraordinary power in the Soviet dictatorship.

Reading your issue of November 2, I noticed that on page 10, under the photograph of a P-38 aircraft, you refer to Mr. Erick Rios Bridoux, the pilot whose plane collided with a commercial airliner, as being a Brazilian.

On behalf of the Brazilian Embassy, I would like to ask your kind attention to this mistake.

The Case Of General Yamashita Pro And Con

By Col. Sidney F. Mashbir

Executive Officer, Adjutant General's Office, Department of the Army.

THE NORMALLY accurate and informative editorial columns of The Washington Post, contain on October 24 an editorial entitled "In Re Yamashita." The obvious misunderstanding of certain basic facts is so egregious that it impels me to offer correction. As the wartime commander of the Allied Translator and Interpreter Section of General MacArthur's headquarters, which furnished all the interpreters for the Yamashita trial and which for several years was engaged in translating the documentary evidence submitted under oath at that trial and the others, the facts are known personally to me.

I make no case for or against the war criminals who were convicted of plotting and conducting "aggressive war." That is a purely legislative question which will probably be discussed for centuries. But the case of Yamashita is not the same type charge as that for which Tojo and others were tried later, but is the case of an outright criminal whose crimes were so vile as to deny him even the honorable death of a soldier, and who was convicted of those crimes according to sworn evidence submitted in accordance with all traditional rules.

COINCIDENT with the landing on Leyte in October, 1944, MacArthur's famous "I Have Returned" message was issued. At the same time a message, short, terse and of unmistakable implication was issued addressed to the Japanese commander in chief in the Philippines which stated in one paragraph, "I will hold you personally responsible for any violations of the laws of war or outrages committed against unarmed noncombatants, civilians or prisoners of war."

In the face of this warning and apparently in the frenzy of impending defeat, orders substantially as follows were issued by headquarters subordinate to Yamashita:

"All Filipinos—men, women and children—who are in the battle area will be put to death. To conserve manpower and ammunition, they will be placed in buildings already destined for destruction by fire or explosion. Bodies will also be thrown in the river."

These "buildings" were the Catholic cathedrals and churches already loaded with explosives and slated to be detonated as soon as the first American plane dropped its first bomb, so that the Japanese could charge us to the deeply religious Filipinos as being guilty of desecrating Christian places of worship. Fortunately, General MacArthur's intelligence had informed him of this so that even had it been our intention to bomb Manila, which it was not, it would have been prevented.

Full evidence, including photographs almost too ghastly to print, of the hundreds of brutal deaths by bayonet and fire of priests, nuns, civilian men, women and even babies, has been submitted in open court.

THE PRINCIPLE of the responsibility of the highest commander in an area is one which particularly in Japan is well recognized. The Japanese phrase, Sekinin wo outte, meaning to assume the responsibility, has preceded suicides throughout Japan's history. In 1923 an overenthusiastic Japanese second lieutenant gave a geisha a cigarette bearing the imperial crest, one of 500 which the Emperor had sent to be distributed among the officers of the Japanese expeditionary forces in Siberia. When detected, the officer committed suicide but the commanding general in Siberia "assumed the responsibility" and was relieved of command and placed on the retired list. If this holds good for a cigarette the principle should be sufficiently sound to cover thousands of murders.

However, the claim made by the defense that Yamashita was not responsible is not valid. It is recognized that a higher commander could not be held for every isolated crime committed by individuals not under his command acting separately and independently, but the responsibility of the higher commander for the action of both units and individuals acting in accordance with orders from higher headquarters is well recognized. Furthermore, even had Yamashita not been guilty in the issuance of these orders, he could not have been unaware of what was going on, and had he desired to do so could have issued the necessary orders to stop the butchery of civilians.

I TAKE particular exception to the statement in your editorial that "he was tried by an American military court, acting under a directive which virtually ordered the verdict of guilty, by instructing the judges to disregard all traditional rules of evidence." Neither General MacArthur nor any other general officer of the American Army would be guilty of issuing such a "directive." No one has a higher regard for military, civil and international law than has General MacArthur, and this accusation will be deeply resented by every officer as a reflection upon the service as a whole.

The five generals who constituted the military commission that tried General Yamashita did find him guilty as a war criminal. The Supreme Commander for the Allied powers confirmed that finding, saying:

"This officer . . . has failed his duty to his troops, to his country, to his enemy and to mankind. He has failed utterly his soldier's faith, his life was a blot on the military profession."

Stripped of the uniform he had disgraced, Yamashita was hanged as the bestial murderer he was. The Yamashita case had nothing in common with the other "war criminal" trials.

THE PUBLISHER of the book has circulated all members of the Senate, and many officials, magazines and papers, including The Washington Post, with a poorly disguised sales letter which drags in the action of the Supreme Court of the United States in refusing to consider the case.

Anyone who has ever ridden a kiddie car past the office of a justice of the peace knows that the Supreme Court of the United States had NO jurisdiction over the International Military Tribunal appointed by General MacArthur, NOT in his capacity as Commander in Chief of the American Forces Pacific, but in the position of Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers.

Our Supreme Court had exactly as much jurisdiction, and no more, as did the Supreme Courts of England, Australia, Holland, Belgium, China and Russia. Dragging them into the case was comparable to having a breach-of-promise complainant cross her legs in the witness box, or producing the weeping aged mother of a criminal charged with burglary.

I trust that The Post will not lend itself further to a sensational attack which tends to weaken public confidence in the integrity of the armed services, in American ideals and in the American Government.

The foregoing is the personal opinion of the undersigned and does not necessarily reflect the opinion of the Department of the Army.

Washington.

By A. Frank Reel

One of General Yamashita's defense counsel and author of The Case of General Yamashita.

COLONEL Mashbir has missed the point of your editorial. He should reread it—better yet, he should read my book, The Case of General Yamashita. He would learn the following facts:

1. Yamashita was not tried by an international tribunal but by an American Military Commission. The commission was appointed pursuant to orders by General MacArthur in his capacity as Commander in Chief of the American Forces Pacific, not as SCAP. England, Russia, Australia, etc., had nothing to do with this case.

2. Perhaps he who has "ridden a kiddie-car past the office of a justice of the peace" knows more about the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court than do its members. The one issue in the Yamashita case on which all of the justices of the Supreme Court agreed was that there was no merit in the prosecution's (and Colonel Mashbir's) contention that American courts could not inquire into the authority of the military commission that tried Yamashita.

Where the justices divided was on the question of whether that inquiry could go into the type of so-called "trial" that was held, the question of whether the courts could correct "errors of decision," the question of whether the vague and loosely drawn charges against Yamashita described a violation of the laws of war, and the question of whether an American tribunal could deny anyone the "due process of law" guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment.

3. THE COLONEL takes exception to your statement that the military commission that convicted Yamashita acted "under a directive which virtually ordered the verdict of guilty, by instructing the judges to disregard all traditional rules of evidence." You were correct.

General MacArthur's directive by its terms ordered the military commission (specially constituted for this trial), to be itself the sole judge of what it might or might not accept as evidence, specifically including "any document which appears . . . to have been signed or issued officially . . . without proof of the signature or issuance of the document . . . Affidavits, depositions, or other statements . . . Any diary, letter, or other document appearing . . . to contain information relating to the charge . . ."

Under this directive the commission admitted a propaganda motion picture film, ex parte opinion statement, including conclusions of guilt, and it systematically denied the traditional rights of confrontation and cross-examination of such "witnesses." The late Mr. Justice Rutledge summarized this MacArthur directive as follows

"A more complete abrogation of customary safeguards relating to the proof, whether in the usual rules of evidence or any reasonable substitute . . . hardly could have been made. So far as the admissability and probative value of evidence was concerned, the directive made the commission a law unto itself.

"It acted accordingly."

4. NO ONE denies that Japanese soldiers committed atrocities and that in some cases they were ordered by subordinate commanders. But it was not even charged, there was no proof and there was no finding, that Yamashita ordered these crimes, condoned them or knew of them. Indeed, the evidence showed that he could not possibly have known of them. The commander of a detachment isolated in Batangas, in a desperate attempt to suppress guerillas, did isue an order to kill all persons in his battle area, but the evidence was uncontradicted that Yamashita knew nothing of this order, that it was directly contrary to his instructions, and that effective communications between this officer and Yamashita's headquarters did not exist.

American success in disrupting the Japanese communications in the Philippines was so complete that after Yamashita's surrender, his captor, Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler, had to furnish him with radio equipment, vehicles, "teams" of searching parties and American planes to drop leaflets telling of the surrender over areas where Yamashita supposed his troops to be.

To speak of "responsibility" in this context is to ignore realities and to confuse the concept of "administrative responsibility" with "criminal responsibility." Never before have we hanged a man because of the acts of other persons over whom he had no control. Never before have we hanged a man—not for anything he did, but because of a position that he held.

That is the point of the case. That is why the late Mr. Justice Murphy spoke of "stark retribution" masquerading in a "cloak of false legalism."

5. THE COLONEL accuses you of "weakening public confidence." On the contrary, by calling attention to this "fateful turning point in American jurisprudence" you are rendering a distinct service to American ideals and to our country's future. There was a time when signs of a "turning point" were visible in Germany, Italy, Russia and Japan—and today we castigate the newspapers of those lands for their blindness and their silence. A mature America, alerted by its free press, can acknowledge its mistakes and return to its great judicial tradition.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Truman And Taft-Hartley

WITH customary ability, John L. Lewis may duck under the wire. But it is still an important fact that President Truman has been prepared to use the Taft-Hartley Act against the United Mine Workers' leader from the very beginning of the present steel and coal strike emergency.

Thus far, throughout an industrial crisis which has already caused the American production index to drop 12 points, the White House has maintained the appearance of supernatural calm. This calm has, however, masked a coolly calculated strategy which says a great deal about the state of our labor laws, the state of our politics, and the state of Mr. Truman.

In effect, this White House strike strategy has been based on a sharp distinction between the politically friendly Philip Murray and his steelworkers and the politically hostile John L. Lewis and his mineworkers. The whole Federal mediation effort has been exclusively concentrated on securing the accord in the steel strike which now seems to be under way. And the intention has been to remove Philip Murray from the line of fire, and then, if necessary, turn all of the Government's big guns on John Lewis.

Even the right moment to turn the guns on Lewis has been selected in advance. It has been foreseen that soon after a steel settlement want of coal will cause the American industrial machine to grind to a second halt. And this, it has been calculated, will provide the right psychological atmosphere for unlimbering the heavy artillery.

LEWIS, who is no fool, evidently fathomed the White House strategy rather early. This, one suspects, was the origin of his surprise attempt to clasp both AFL and CIO to his bosom, in united support of the steel strike. If the other labor leaders had not eluded Lewis' embrace, they would then have been duty-bound to support the coal strike too.

As it is, Lewis remains isolated. The White House shrewdly calculates that the rest of organized labor will not really resent the use of the "slave labor law" to drive the maverick into line. And Lewis evidently agrees, judging by his sudden attempt to secure an accord with the coal owners which may be announced simultaneously with an accord in the steel strike. At the moment it looks as though the mere implied threat of the White House strategy will spare the President the embarrassment of using the powers which he has asked the Congress to do away with.

The first point to note about this strategy, which may work automatically without ever being unveiled, is its political astuteness. The embarrassment of using Taft-Hartley was frankly accepted, in a realistic manner, as less grave than the economic damage that could be done by inaction. But the sincere labor allies of the White House were to be spared, while an enemy was to be made to suffer.

Such careful calculation, such adroit planning, illustrate the very high political value the President places upon his labor support. The men who did the staffwork were Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin, White House Counsel Clark Clifford, and one or two others. But the work they did is strongly symptomatic of their chief's interest in the political future. In short, this White House labor strategy, like the recognition of James Roosevelt in California, is another straw in the wind pointing toward President Truman's candidacy to succeed himself.

SECOND, even if the President is able in the end to avoid using Taft-Hartley (as he certainly fervently hopes he may), there is significance in the mere fact that the White House recognized the possible necessity. Secretary of Labor Tobin's testimony against Taft-Hartley's national emergency clauses never carried much conviction, since the President had already used these clauses no less than seven times. As a result of the present crisis, the White House now seems to be moving toward a more realistic position. The national emergency clauses of Taft-Hartley are still in disfavor, but some positive substitute for them is now desired.

A remarkable new scheme is therefore being discussed in the Truman inner circle. Under this scheme, certain basic industries—steel, coal, the railroads, probably oil, and possibly atomic energy—would be classified as essential to the general welfare. Workers in such industries would be required to forgo the right to strike. But in return for accepting compulsory arbitration, workers in "essential" industries would also be guaranteed a privileged status, with pension and wage benefits going beyond those prevailing in nonessential industries.

Whether such a scheme can be sold to the labor organizations remains to be seen. But the mere fact that a scheme of this sort is even being considered at the White House says much about Truman's attitude toward the evolution of the welfare state.

War Hero Deputy Waives Immunity In French Theft

Paris, Nov. 3 (AP).—A one-armed war hero waived his immunity as a member of Parliament today to permit his arrest in a much-talked-of bond theft case.

Police arrested the deputy, Antoine de Recy, one-time aide of Gen. Henri Giraud, soon after the National Assembly had decided—at his request—to lift the immunity rule. He asked it to justify himself in the eyes of the law.

De Recy, a follower of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, is charged with being implicated in the theft of about $300,000 worth of French treasury bonds at Arras last summer.

New Fairchild Directorate Ups Dividend

By S. Oliver Goodman

Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corp., whose old management was unseated last July after a bitter proxy fight, has increased its dividend to 35 cents a common share.

The new dividend, payable December 5 to stock of record November 17, compares with 20 cents a share paid in 1948.

President Richard S. Boutelle said the $800,000 will be the largest single payment to stockholders in the corporation's history. Boutelle also formally announced the New York offices of the corporation have been closed and all administrative functions have been moved to Hagerstown, Md.

This step fulfilled promises made to stockholders last July when a group associated with Sherman Fairchild, founder of the firm, was engaged in a battle to regain control. They advocated the move to Hagerstown where the main airplane building plant has been located for many years.

Boutelle revealed that a 70-million-dollar backlog of orders includes 144 Fairchild C-119s for the Army and Navy and an undisclosed number of guided missiles for the Navy and Air Force. Also, the company holds the primary contract for the development at Oak Ridge, Tenn., of an atomic engine for aircraft propulsion.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 3 (AP).—After a display of strength which sent several contracts to new 1949 highs, the grain market retreated quickly today when selling pressure expanded. The final result was that everything ended lower except corn.

Some unusual market movements also went on in lard. While the November delivery sank to the lowest level for any lard future since 1941, all later months at least held steady. The drop in November followed fairly large deliveries on this contract late yesterday.

Wheat closed ¼ to ⅞ lower; corn was ⅜ to ¾ lower; oats were ⅛ to ⅜ lower; rye was 1½ to 1¾ lower; soybeans were ¾ to 1¼ lower, and lard was 20 cents lower to 10 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Profit Taking Curbs Rising Stock Prices

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Profit-taking sales clamped down on a rising stock market today.

Railway and selected airline issues did well but generally the market was a trifle wobbly. Price changes either way were mainly fractional, with losses and gains well divided.

Trading once more topped the one million-share mark. Sales of 1,360,000 shares compared with 1,570,000 Wednesday.

Better prospects for industrial peace helped prop prices Wednesday but today coal strike negotiations were still stalled and progress, if any, toward settlement of the steel strike was not disclosed.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks remained at 68.7, its high since November 1 last year. The railway group advanced, trailed by utilities, but this improvement was offset by a decline in the industrial section.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Thurs.	Wed.

Business Outlook

'New' Way to Boom Industry: Draw All Shades, Foil the Sun

By J. A. Livingston

HERE'S something to tuck away in a file cabinet or purse for next winter when Congress is in session. It was written by a man you probably never heard of, Frederic Bastiat, a French economist, who, in his small way, rates as a satirist with Erasmus, Swift, Voltaire, Samuel Butler, W. S. Gilbert, and, among the moderns, George B. Shaw, George Orwell and William Saroyan.

Livingston

Bastiat, who was born in 1801, lived until 1850 in horror of high tariffs and once, to release his ire, he addressed to the Chamber of Deputies a mock petition from manufacturers of candles, tapers, lamps, alcohol, oil, and "in general anything connected with illumination." This was his plea:

"We are subjected to the intolerable competition of a foreign rival in the production of light. He inundates our market at fabulously reduced prices, for as soon as he shows himself our sales cease, all our consumers turn to him, and a branch of French industry whose ramifications are innumerable is all of a sudden smitten with stagnation. That rival, which is no other than the sun, wages a war with us so inexorable that we suspect he is stirred up by perfidious Albion since he treats that haughty island with a consideration dispensed with in our case.

"We demand that you pass a law which shall ordain the closing of all windows, dormer-windows, reflectors, shutters, curtains, casements, bull's-eyes, shades; in short, of all openings, holes, slits, fissures, through which the sun is accustomed to penetrate into houses. . . .

"IF YOU CLOSE, as far as possible, all access to natural light, what industry in France would not be encouraged? If more tallow is consumed, more oxen and sheep will be needed, and we shall, in consequence, see an increase of artificial meadows, of meat, wool, leather, and, above all, of fertilizers, that basis of all agricultural wealth.

"If more oil is consumed, we shall see the poppy, the olive tree, colza more extensively cultivated. These rich and exhausting plants will opportunely benefit by the fertility that the breeding of cattle will have communicated to the soil. Our heaths will be covered with resinous trees. Numerous swarms of bees will gather on our mountains the perfumed treasures which today are uselessly dissipated like the flowers whence they originate.

"The same is the case with navigation: Thousands of vessels will be engaged in whale fishery, and before long we shall have a navy capable of maintaining the honor of France. . . .

"Imagine the gilding, the bronzes, the crystals in chandeliers, lamps, candlesticks, candelabra. Down to the very resin-gatherer on his moorland heights or to the sad miner in the depths of his dark gallery, there is no one who will not see his wages and his well-being augumented. . . .

"WILL YOU tell us, gentlemen, that if we profit by this protection France will not profit because the consumer will pay the cost? . . . When you were told that the consumer is interested in the free importation of iron, coal, sesame, wheat, textiles, you said yes, but the producer, the laborer, is interested in their exclusion. Well, then! If the consumers are interested in the admission of natural light, the producers (laborers) are interested in its interdiction . . .

"Will you say that the sunlight is a free gift and that to reject free gifts would be to reject wealth itself? If a Lisbon orange is sold at half the price of a Paris orange, it is because a natural, and consequently a gratuitous, heat does for the one what the other owes to an artificial and therefore a costly heat. How can home labor stand the competition of foreign labor when the latter has to do only half the work, the sun taking the rest upon itself? If a half gratuity determines you to shut out competition, you must—and with twice the emphasis—reject the complete gratuity.

"Choose but be logical; inasmuch as you will shut out, as you do, coal, iron, wheat, foreign textiles, in proportion as their price approaches zero, how inconsistent is it to admit the light of the sun, whose price is actually zero throughout the entire day?"

Lawford Strives: 'Musical' Strains

By Richard L. Coe

THE CAPITOL has a bill which will be popular—one of those musical plum cake movies which everybody seems to relish except me, and a vivacious vaudeville show headlined by likable Peter Lawford.

The Technicolored musical picture is "That Midnight Kiss," wherein presumed culture is dished out with that overwhelming largesse which raises in me only a strong yen to belch.

Jose Iturbi wangs away at the juicier portions of the Liszt and Tschaikowsky piano concertos, the while conducting a symphony orchestra with imperial nods and free-hand scoops. Ethel Barrymore, looking for all the world like a gigantic headdress of the Versailles court; delectable Kathryn Grayson chirping like an infantile angel from a finishing school, and a luridly sickening finale, setting gruesome lyrics to the Tschaikowsky Fifth Symphony, are some of the plums.

The big news, I suppose, is the appearance of a bulky young man whose voice is electrically hypoed to raging tenor. His name is Mario Lanza, the role he plays is a sort of overgrown sophomore. He's been assigned the lushest of the Italian operatic repertoire and I'm sure everyone will love him except those unfortunate beagles among us who can tell the difference between the sound of the human voice and the whirring of electric cathodes.

"THAT MIDNIGHT KISS," M-G-M release produced by Joe Pasternak. Screen play by Bruce Manning and Tamara Hovey. Photographed in Technicolor by Robert Surtees. Music by Jerome Kern and Herbert Raynolds, with operatic and symphonic excerpts from other sources. Directed by Norman Taurog. At the Capitol.

The story is one of those slight things with no relation whatsoever to life. Miss Barrymore is a Philadelphia dowager who commands Iturbi (playing himself) to drop his symphonw rehearsal and come down to the house to hear her granddaughter sing, an accomplishment which mysteriously has evaded him, though he appears to be an intimate of the household.

Miss Grayson is the granddaughter and, natch, Iturbi okays Granny's decision to start an opera company to show off the family songbird. The company's tenor proves to be a temperamental fool who wouldn't get to first base anywhere, especially in Philadelphia. Kathryn can't get along with him, but when she finds a truck driver who can sing and looks as though he's recently taken to shaving, the lad's in. Everyone's a sensation and loves everyone else madly.

Like Nothing on Earth

The mastermind behind all this is Producer Joe Pasternak, who's been popularizing what passes for "long hair" music since the dawn of Deanna Durbin. Joe's been getting further off his rocker every film since those happy days, and with Metro's massive resources to play with you can imagine his dazzling frenzy.

The fact that M. Pasternak has been egregiously successful in all his musical plumcakes has nothing to do with the complete lack of taste in his approach. Music isn't created like this, musicians aren't like this, their patrons aren't like this, nobody in any of his pictures is like anything else on earth. And if his idea of popularizing "good" music is to show, while some aria is being intoned, the ecstacy or gum-chewing of an audience, it's not mine.

Having had my say on all this ghastly business, let me proceed to more cheerful things.

Lawford's Act Clicks

Screen Star Lawford proves to have a more genial act than the usual West Coast visitor and he's well paired with Joey Adams, a guy with energetic amiability.

Peter caught on neatly at yesterday's first show, fitting in the telling of some flat gags (on purpose, girls) and joshing with the closer members of his fan clubs. He winds up dancing and you'll enjoy his no-holds-barred efforts to entertain you.

Adams is of the better breed of those Broadway hillbillies who too often pass for comics. He's got a nice way with his gags and as a straightman for Lawford is swell.

Sam Jack Kaufman's band is up on the raised pit this week, with the performers working in front, a catching trick that puts the entertainers literally in the laps of the house. Things are started nicely with a tap-dancing routine by Joan and Robert Rexer. Again, energy is the keynote, and the kids have it. Marion Colby is the week's singer, with some out-of-the-way numbers.

JO MIELZINER, one of America's leading stage designers—his book's a classic—will design and light the settings for Catholic University's second production of the season, "The Real McCoy," by Dartmouth's John Finch. The play was once known as "The Dragon Downstairs." . . . This is considerable honor for Father Hartke's group; Mielziner for years has admired C. U's. work in the theater and has offered to create the settings as his appreciation for the group's work in the past . . . His model already is made and ready for the staff's James M. Waring to construct . . . Mielziner will be down to supervize the final phases and tricky lighting.

TONIGHT'S OPENING: "Romeo and Juliet," first of the fall term offerings at Catholic University.

IN NEW MUSICAL—Mario Lanza, a new face with a voice, is introduced by Kathryn Grayson, no longer a new face but still with a voice, in Metro's new saturnalia at the Capitol, "That Midnight Kiss." On the stage, Peter Lawford headlines the bill

AWOL Charge Brings Suspension To D. C. Policeman

Police Pvt. Harold C. Huffman, 46, formerly of the homicide squad, was suspended from duty yesterday by Capt. Howard V. Covell, of the First Precinct, when Huffman reported for duty. He was charged with being absent without leave for 10 days.

Huffman was demoted from the homicide squad to work as a plainclothes officer, on last June 16 for "conduct not in the best interest of the service." This also involved absence. At the time, Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent, asked Huffman not to resign because he was a "very valuable detective." He has had 17 commendations in 16 years on the force, 14 of them for the work in the homicide squad.

Violinist Dies During Baltimore Symphony Concert

Baltimore, Nov. 3 (AP).—Benjamin Sosner, 42-year-old first violinist of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, collapsed and died last night during the orchestra's first concert of the season.

Reginald Stewart was conducting Brahms' Symphony No. 1. Sosner broke into a cold sweat as the third movement, a scherzo, started. Walter J. de Lillo, sitting beside Sosner, urged the stricken violinist to go backstage.

Sosner stumbled into the wings and collapsed into the arms of a property man. He died before an ambulance arrived, before the end of the scherzo he had started.

Donaldson Warns Bill To Benefit Postal Workers Will Cost $900 Million

Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson last night made pointed and sharp remarks on the demands made on his department at the annual convention of the National Association of Postmasters in Chicago.

He explained that one bill in Congress to benefit his 500,000 postal workers would cost 900 million dollars a year. The cost of legislation finally approved by Congress, he said, will be about 150 million dollars a year. The man who rose from the ranks to be a Cabinet member then said:

"It was necessary for me to express disapproval of much of this proposed legislation affecting the postal service. My disapproval was not based upon any feeling that postal employes were already overpaid or that they were not deserving of some of the benefits proposed. It was based on the general trend of the legislation and the many benefits requested which would so greatly increase the deficit in the postal service and at the same time present the problems of discrimination.

Responsible to the Public

"My testimony on these bills did not tend to increase my popularity with postal people. It was not only my duty, but a responsibility imposed upon me to operate the postal service for the benefit of the public as well as for the benefit of the postal employes.

"We in the postal service cannot lose sight of that fact that we work for the people, our patrons, and we cannot be so selfish as to constantly think about ourselves to the exclusion of the welfare of the country and the people of the country. No single employe has this responsibility, but it is imposed upon the management of the postal service."

At another point Donaldson asked his audience these two questions: "Can I be blamed as Postmaster General who is charged with the responsibility for the conduct of the postal service if I make a fight for increased postal rates, and if I oppose exhorbitant demands for benefits to postal people? What would you do if you were charged with my responsibility?"

Favors Revision of Act

The Cabinet member said the average salary of the postal employe from janitor to postmaster had risen from $1950 to about $3500 since 1945. He said he still felt that the Postal Salary reclassification Act of 1945 should be revised to eliminate discrimination and to place salaries on the responsibilities of the positions. Donaldson also insisted that there was a direct relationship between increased postal rates and increased postal salaries.

The official who operates the world's largest business—the postal service—accused those who charge that between 200 million dollars and 300 million dollar annually could be saved by his department if it adopted the recommendations in the Hoover report of using propaganda "to offset and to minimize my recommendations for increased rates on low revenue-producing mail." He explained that 95 percent of postal costs goes for salaries and transporation and that he has no control over these costs.

GSA: The big new layoff of War Assets employes will also hit people in the Bureau of Federal Supply, Public Buildings, and other agencies in General Services Administration.

WAA will abolish 1175 of its 1800 jobs by December 1. Many of its employes with higher retention rights will "bump" BFS, PBA, and other agency employes out of their jobs. This is the law and it can do nothing about it despite strong protests. About 350 WAA jobs will be knocked out.

JOBS: Civil Service has exams open for: phone operator and supervisor, $2284 to $2724 to start; staff and head nurse, $2974 to $3727, and strategic materials inspector, $2974 to $6235.

FTC: Two Southerners have strong support for the Democratic vacancy on the Federal Trade Commission. They are: John Wheelock, who was the legal advisor to the late Commissioner Davis for the past 10 years, and Clarence M. Dinkens, a Washington attorney who is a former FTC employe. Wheelock has the backing of Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), and Senator Johnston (D., S. C.) is supporting Dinkens.

Word Battle At New High As Virginia Voting Nears

Campbell Poll Tax Amendments Are Prime Targets of Fireworks in State

By The Associated Press

Virginia's political front was rocked yesterday by one of the heaviest exchanges of fire of the general election campaign. Most of the activity concerned the controversial Campbell amendments.

Speaking in Williamsburg, Francis Pickens Miller termed the amendments "phony" proposals for "creating and maintaining government of the few in place of representative democracy."

In a statement issued in Richmond, Delegate Stuart B. Campbell, chairman of the commission which drew up the amendments, supported the proposals and gave another explanation of them.

The former Wythe member of the House of Delegates said nothing could be simpler than the proposed methods for renewing registration:

(1) Personal application to the local board; (2) Voting in the preceding year; or (3) paying personal taxes before the penalty date.

Discusses Amendments

The amendments, he said, "either of themselves, or with implementing statutes":

"1. Eliminate the payment of a poll tax or any other tax as a prerequisite to voting or registering.

"2. Create a bi-partisan state board of elections with over-all supervisory authority designed to secure fairness and honesty in elections.

"3. Provide a bipartisan local board of elections charged with registering all new voters, renewing all registrations, appointing the local election officials in each precinct, and supervising the conduct of elections within its county or city.

"4. The minority political party is given representation of its own choosing on the local boards and in the clerks and judges of election, thus guaranteeing bipartisan supervision for every election process.

"5. Provide, through annual renewal of registration, a definite list of those eligible to vote in such precinct for every election, thus bringing certainty out of frequent confusion, giving any interested party an effective opportunity to challenge the eligibility of any person offering to vote, and furnishing an adequate means of trying such challenges.

"6. Limit the power of the General Assembly to levy a poll tax not connected with voting in any way, by fixing a ceiling of $3 and requiring that, if imposed, it be spent for schools."

Attacks on the amendments were delivered in Lynchburg by both sides in the political campaign—and by the middle.

Arnold Backs Battle

Remmie L. Arnold, defeated candidate in the August Democratic primary along with Miller, reiterated his opposition to the amendments and at the same time appealed for support of the party nominee, John S. Battle, in Tuesday's election, in a statement at Petersburg.

The Baptist General Association of Virginia, in a statement by its president in Roanoke, made "no statement of position" concerning the Campbell amendments.

But one of the most surprising moves came in Richmond when a Republican who supported Battle in the Democratic primary urged the defeat of both Battle and the proposed amendments in next Tuesday's general election.

Maj. Henry A. Wise, former GOP national committeeman for Virginia, leaped into the current political tussle with a transcribed radio address over Station WRNL here.

Wise had a ready explanation for his espousal of the Battle candidacy last summer and his repudiation now that Battle has become the Democratic nominee.

In the hotly fought primary, he recalled, non-Virginia union leaders were intervening, so he thought he should help "repel the interference of outsiders in what was a purely domestic situation"—especially since "there was no contest in my party."

Walter Johnson, the GOP nominee for Governor, was unopposed in the Republican primary. Wise tonight urged voters to support Johnson and the other GOP nominees at the polls on Tuesday.

3 Opponents Listed

Opposing the amendments in Lynchburg were Edward S. Graves, president of the Lynchburg Bar Association who supported Miller in the Democratic primary; L. G. Mauer, city Republican chairman; and the "mid-publican chairman, and the "mid-M. Bowman.

Said Bowman, who will have to revise registration lists if the amendments are approved: "The amendments are all cock-eyed."

Dinner for Gen. Cates

In Lusty Race

Arlington Candidates Hit Stretch

The tempo of political oratory was stepped up several degrees in Arlington last night as candidates entered the last lap of two lusty political races.

Speaking at separate rallies, candidates made the following declarations:

Robert W. Cox, nonpartisan candidate for the county board, said: "Basil M. DeLashmutt (Democratic incumbent) is the high tax man in this campaign . . . the machine is trying to tell you that I want high taxes . . . that is false and they know it. DeLashmutt must be held responsible in large measure for the unfair distribution of the tax burden in this county"

Accuses DeLashmutt

Cox said the tax rate would not have to be so high if tax and equities had been ironed out years ago. DeLashmutt is for low taxes "on land held for speculative purposes by him and his land speculator family and associates."

Cox said DeLashmutt twice voted for postponement of a reassessment voted for in 1944, and that "a long-overdue reassessment made in 1946 . . . increased the assessment on the Barcroft acres (an apartment unit owned by one of the DeLashmutt brothers) by 1500 percent, and delaying the reassessment for two years, DeLashmutt sayed more than $6000 taxes on Barcroft land."

Jacob Bechtel, independent county board candidate, pointed out that "pressure groups" such as the Better Government Leage are supporting Cox.

"Those permanent sidewalks Mr. DeLashmutt put down, I'm wondering where they are."

I. Lee Potter, Republican candidate for either of two Arlington seats in the State House of Delegates, declared that the Democratic incumbent, J. Maynard Magruder is "trying to wave the flag" in criticizing Potter's war record. Potter said he tried to enlist in the Navy in 1942, and was rejected for physical reasons.

He charged that "the great Magruder who claims he's a friend of the veteran, as part owner of the nonessential radio office building on Wilson blvd., took advantage of the entire veterans' housing program by getting a small amount of concrete dumped in footing trenches the final day before controls were imposed so he could proceed with his construction."

Need of practical business experience for members of the Arlington County board was stressed last night by DeLashmutt, Democratic candidate for reelection to that body.

Speaking at a rally at the Virginia Highlands fire house, and attended by about 200 persons, DeLashmutt lashed out at opponents, who, he said, belittle business experience as a qualification for board membership.

He said that "if there ever was a time in the history of the county when a practical understanding of the value of a dollar is necessary, it is now." He stressed the need for such knowledge in view of the projected capital expenditure program in the county.

Cox, Bechtel and Potter spoke at a meeting of the Barcroft Civic League, held in the Barcroft Community House at 8th and S. Buchanan sts.

Soldier, 17, Beaten Robbed By 2 Men

A 17-year-old soldier told police he was attacked and robbed by two men in the Capitol grounds near 1st st. and Maryland ave. early yesterday.

He is Pvt. Eugene DuBeau, attached to the Naval Hospital at Portsmouth, Va. He said the men took his wallet containing $3 and identification papers. After treatment at Casualty Hospital for severe bruises about the head and abdomen, he was transferred to Walter Reed Hospital.

Non-Partisan Vote Debated In Alexandria

The Democratic Party in Alexandria "will virtually disintegrate" under nonpartisan election of city officials, Talbot Sinclair, Democratic committeeman, asserted last night at a forum discussion of nonpartisan elections.

But Alexandria today, a one-party city, can't continue in that condition indefinitely, said Don K. Price, a member of the City Charter Revision Commission which is recommending nonpartisan election of the city council, a city attorney and a city collector.

Speak to Citizens Group

Sinclair and Price, together with Mayor Franklin P. Backus and Mrs. W. F. Pfeiffer, president of the Alexandria League of Women Voters, spoke before the North Ridge Citizens Association last night at George Mason School, Alexandria.

The nonpartisan issue will be the subject of an advisory referendum next Tuesday at the election.

Sinclair declared nonpartisan elections would better be called a "multiparty" election.

"The only party that will suffer," he declared, "will be the Democratic Party. Every other party, group, clique and clan—including Communist and Fascist—will gain by it."

Price declared that Alexandria is not like Lynchburg, Petersburg or Richmond in its election.

It Can't Continue

"It will not be quite so clearly a one-party city in the future," Price said. "Alexandria can't continue in that condition indefinitely."

Mayor Backus, one of the two members of the seven-man City Council opposing nonpartisan election, said Alexandria government would be controlled by minority groups if party tags were taken out.

Mrs. Pfeiffer, who said the league strongly backs nonpartisan elections, said they would offer the best type of government for Alexandria. She said over the country such elections have become the rule rather than the exception.

Around 65 persons attended the meeting.

Navy Unit Seeks to Evict 4 Families

Potomac River Naval Command yesterday asked the United States Attorney's Office here to institute eviction proceedings against four civilian families refusing to move from the Navy-owned Bellevue Housing Development in Anacostia.

In July, the command announced that civilians would have to leave the low-rent development to make way for families of enlisted personnel assigned to the neighboring Naval Gun Factory.

A total of 69 of the 355 families have moved, some before receiving individual notices. The command set up a priority plan of removals based on easing out the higher income civilians first.

Thirty-six with incomes over $5000 a year who were not veterans were asked to leave by November 1 and all except four families did. The command yesterday asked for legal action against the four.

An additional 42 have been notified to leave by December 1 and the process will continue month by month until all are vacated.

Rents range from $35 for one-bedroom apartments to $51 for three-bedroom units. The apartments were originally erected by the Navy Department for war-workers' families and later were operated by National Capital Housing Authority. The Navy took back control in February.

Water Cost Here Put at $60 Million

Construction Rate Must be Increased In 5 or 10 Years, Whitesell Warns

Between now and 1970, the District will have to spend about 60 million dollars in capital outlay for its water system, Lieut. Col. C. H. Whitesell, assistant D. C. Engineer Commissioner, said yesterday.

Income from water rates will provide all but eight million of this amount by that time, but the rate of construction must be speeded up in the next five or 10 years just to catch up with demand, Col. Whitesell said.

Cost of this acceleration will exceed income by perhaps 17 million dollars by 1960, he said.

Addresses Delegates

Colonel Whitesell's remarks came as he welcomed delegates to the annual meeting of the Chesapeake section of the American Water Works Association, which continues today at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The section includes members from the District, Maryland and Delaware. Edwin A. Schmitt, head engineer and chief of the water supply division of the Washington Aqueduct System, Corps of Engineers, is chairman of the conference.

Though capital outlay appropriations for the District water supply exceeded 12 million dollars during the past five years, Colonel Whitesell said, "we are still uncomfortably far behind."

Expansion work thus far is based on a long-term plan, but is behind schedule because of high costs of construction and operation, he said.

Among the technical discussions at yesterday's session was that of Dr. A. P. Black, head of the chemistry department at the University of Florida and president of the American Water Works Association. He spoke on improved methods of water chlorination during the past decade.

Plant Inspected

An oyster roast for the members was held at the Dalecarlia filtration plant, followed by an inspection of the pant.

A panel on sanitary districts will be held at 10:45 a. m. today, with E. R. Cotton, director of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin, as moderator.

Another panel, scheduled for 1:40 p. m, with distribution systems as the subject, will be moderated by David V. Auld, superintendent of the District water division. D. C. water division members participating will be R. L. Orndorff, assistant superintendent; J. B. Allen, chief engineer, and J. R. Mitchell, in charge of operation and maintenance.

White House Work Bid Approved

Completion of Job In Early Fall of 1951 Indicated; Go-Ahead Due Soon

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The $100,000 fixed-fee bid of the John McShain Co. to do the big White House renovation job was approved yesterday by the Commission on Renovation of the Executive Mansion.

McShain will have 660 calendar days—about 22 months—from the day he is given a go-ahead in which to finish the $4,160,000 job. This will mean completion is expected in early fall of 1951.

The contractor was the low bidder for the job. A contract is expected to be signed next week. The go-ahead probably will follow shortly afterwards.

The commission yesterday also looked over the latest draft of White House floor plans, prepared by White House Architect Lorenzo S. Winslow. A formal approval may be given at the next meeting in two or three weeks.

The floor plan of the Executive Mansion is not expected to be materially altered from what it is today. The only main floor change will be in the grand staircase. Instead of coming down from the second floor into the east-west hallway as at present, it will lead to the main hall to the east of the front door.

This plan, Winslow explained, will make it possible for a grander approach to the first floor on state occasions. At receptions the President and his family usually come downstairs while the band plays "Hail to the Chief."

Upstairs the emphasis will be on more closet space for every room. This will call for some shifts in wall locations, but is not expected to affect the number of rooms.

The second floor east-west corridor, long a barn-like, drafty affair, is due for some improvement. The four steps up at the east end (due to the fact that the East Room underneath has a higher ceiling than other first-floor rooms) will be turned into a gradual ramp. The walls all along the corridor are expected to have built-in bookcases. The open areas at either end will continue to be small family sitting rooms. Winslow believes the air-conditioning-heating system will eliminate the drafts.

Judge Collet Improving

Judge John C. Collet of Kansas City still is on the "serious list," although he is improving, Walter Reed Hospital attendants said yesterday. The judge suffered a heart attack October 16 while visiting here.

Godwin Recalls Hot Soup Era In Praising Community Chest

RED FEATHER HEAT WAVE—Shirley Lindall, Military District of Washington key worker, displays MDW's Red Feather thermometer, which has zoomed past the breaking point to 190 percent of the 1950 Community Chest quota. Collections total $5633.77, compared to a goal of $2952.58

Elimination of Community Chest agencies would throw Washington back "practically in the dark ages," Earl Godwin, news commentator, told a luncheon meeting of Business II workers for the 1950 campaign yesterday.

"If you can get across to the people the lifetime of experience I've watched in Washington," he said, "you will know that the Community Chest in Washington has uplifted the people and made humanity better."

"Helter-Skelter" Times

Godwin, a District native, said he remembered the "helter-skelter manner" in which charities were carried out by private individuals when he was a schoolboy.

"Charities then were carried on largely by people carrying baskets of food and buckets of hot soup to poor people on cold days," Godwin said. None of the constructive work now being supported by the Chest agencies had been initiated at that time, and there was not even a specific idea of how much charity was needed.

Now, however, he said, Washington has "solidified into a metropolitan area of the first class with first class problems. It is no longer possible to look at charity as baskets of food carried by ladies with shawls."

It's a Responsibility

He called the Community Chest a "modern idea" in keeping with modern thought growing out of a new appreciation by the "masses of intelligent people that we are responsible for the welfare of the city—that we must do what we can for those people who can't help themselves."

At the luncheon session, Business II reported it has reached 25.9 percent of its goal. At another luncheon meeting, Advance Gifts reported a jump from 35 to 50 percent of its goal. Quota in the campaign is $3,991,000.

Workman's Plunge In Water Works

PATH OF FALL—Karl Mantelero, 21, of 29 Franklin st. ne., escaped with scalp lacerations yesterday when he fell 30 feet to a concrete floor in the Bryant Street Pumping Station. An employe of the ABCD Corp., contractors, Mantelero was standing on an iron platform (top) when it broke loose and both he and the platform fell (arrow) to the floor. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital for observation. A number of old pumps at the station are being removed for replacement by new pumps, officials said

On Tricycle

Lost Boy, 3, Goes 4 Miles To See 'Mom'

A vigorous and venturesome 3-year-old, aboard his tricycle, traveled 4 miles yesterday "to see my mommy" while police, his caretaker and others searched frantically for him.

His three-wheeled voyage was interrupted as he traveled full-sail along Rhode Island ave., in Mount Rainier.

When police there took him to their station, over his strong objection, he told them his name, his mother's name, and the fact that he was on his way to visit her at her work in Hyattsville. Further, he knew exactly where she worked, and he was right.

The boy is Frank Lohr, son of Mrs. Phyllis Lohr, 3628 12th st. ne. While she works at the Hot Shoppe in Hyattsville the boy is left in care of Mrs. Telia Baker at her home at 5013 11th st. ne.

A sister, Ellen Lohr, 5, also is cared for by Mrs. Baker, along with her own 3-year-old, Donna Sue.

Early yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Baker told police, she was talking on the telephone with her husband, Howard. Ellen was inside, she said, and Frank and Donna Sue were both in the back yard on tricycles. The conversation completed, Mrs. Baker said, she went out to find both the three-year-olds were gone. A search of the neighborhood finally turned up Donna Sue two blocks from home. But not Frank.

Considerably later, Pvt. Daniel W. Manuel of Mount Rainier police was flagging traffic at 34th st. and Rhode Island ave. As a light turned red he noticed a very small boy on a tricycle start across the street against a red light. He blew his whistle. The little tike kept on.

Whereupon Manuel went over and snatched the lad out of harm's way. But Frank didn't want to be snatched. He offered to fight the 6-foot 180-pound policeman.

Twelfth Precinct police entered the search. Descriptions were broadcast. Scout cars scoured the streets. Neighbors and friends joined the search. No Frank.

Three hours after he set out, Frank wound up four miles away in the Mount Rainier police station. Officers there telephoned the 12th Precinct, whose officers retrieved the resolute little wanderer and his trike. They were happy to return him to Mrs. Baker and she was admittedly happy to give him over to Mrs. Lohr.

Partial Move From District Urged for Government

Engineers Hear Varied Evidence Of Growing Pains In Washington

Washington's growing pains were outlined in detail here yesterday to civil engineers in annual assembly—and the picture wasn't pretty.

First, Harland Bartholomew of St. Louis, who knows this city like a set of blueprints, told them the District never will be able to handle traffic properly until much of the Government is moved out, at least from the District's center.

He recommended the moving, too.

Then, District Sanitary Engineer Harold A. Kemp told of the present sad state of river pollution in this area. The Potomac, for a 35-mile stretch, he said, carries an industrial waste load five times greater than normal for the population served.

And the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin, with power to advise but not enforce antipollution measures, can do little about it, Kemp said.

Potomac pollution is so great, he told the engineers, that "long reaches are devoid of any fish or plant life." And the river is so muddy it hampers rescue of the drowning, and threatens to cover over its vast oyster beds, he added.

Other speakers told how suburban Washington is outgrowing its highways faster than the States can replace them; that the White House remained upright only by force of habit for the past 45 years, and, that another city, Los Angeles, has troubles, too.

A 12-square mile area bordering the Los Angeles-Long Beach harbor is sinking 2 inches every month, reported Commander Lewis C. Coxe, public works officer of the Long Beach Naval Shipyard. The sinking since 1937, he said, "had reached the astonishing total of 9 feet" and has required erection of Holland-like dikes to pritect waterfront installations.

The civil engineers, some 1200 of them representing the 27,000-member American Society of Civil Engineers, are scheduled to meet again today in closing day session. But not to hear of any more troubles. The day has been set aside for excursions and other social activities.

Bartholomew, former member of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and now engaged by the commission in assembling data for its comprehensive Metropolitan Area Plan, spoke before the ASCE's city planning division at the Hotel Statler.

Largely because of Federal employment centers in central Washington, he said, some 754,000 persons converge here on any one typical day. By comparison, Bartholomew said, only 375,000 persons enter the central business district in St. Louis, an area of comparable size.

Bartholomew placed the blame on "the lack of bold planning in the arrangement of the business district and the (lack of) a more firm and intelligent policy in the location of the Federal employment centers."

William F. Childs, jr., chief engineer of the Maryland State Roads Commission, told another session of the engineers it will cost 48 million dollars to modernize 125 miles of Maryland roads in the Washington area.

Even if the money were available, he said, such an expenditure could scarcely be justified for an area representing less than 1 percent of the land area of Maryland.

C. S. Mullen, who holds down a similar job for Virginia, estimated that 17 million dollars would be required to modernize that State's Washington area roadways. Both said they thought their States should receive more Federal funds for such road building and road repair.

W. E. Reynolds, District Commissioner of Public Buildings, told the visiting engineers just how badly the White House needs its present 6-million-dollar revamping.

"For all we could find," Reynolds said, "only force of habit kept the White House standing for the past 45 years."

Guggenheim Dies; Financier Was 88

New York, Nov. 3 (Spl.).—Solomon Guggenheim, last of seven brothers who made fabulous fortunes and industrial, financial, philanthropic and esthetic history in the United States, died today. He was 88.

Death came to him at his estate at Sands Point, Long Island, after a serious illness of only 10 days, though he had been in poor health for some months. He went to his New York office until three weeks ago.

When he died, his wife, the former Irene M. Rothschild, and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Obre of Baltimore, were at his bedside.

Another daughter, the Countess of Castle Stewart, England, was reported flying here. In addition, he is survived by another daughter, Miss Gertrude Guggenheim, and a nephew, Col. M. Robert Guggenheim, 4400 Broad Branch rd., Washington.

A Native of Philadelphia

Born in Philadelphia, February 2, 1861, he was the fourth son of Meyer and Barbara Myers Guggenheim. His father, a Swiss immigrant, was a small merchant who began his career selling shoelaces and later was a manufacturer of stove polish and lye. The father went into the business of importing European laces and fancywork, and the sons grew into that business.

While still a young man, Solomon Guggenheim was taken from school in this country and sent to Switzerland to complete his education. He began to take an interest in the family importing business, and at 21 was made a full partner with his brothers.

In 1879, a change occurred that affected not only the family fortunes, but also the history of the Nation. The family became involved in a silver mine and finally Solomon, who had returned to this country, went to Leadville, Colo., to familiarize himself with the mining business. He transferred in 1889 to Monterey, Mexico, and remained in that country until 1895.

Take Over Association

In 1899, M. Guggensheim's Sons, as the firm of sons had become known, was invited to join a smelters' organization formed that year among 18 of the largest such plants in the country under the name American Smelting & Refining Co.

The Guggenheims agreed to enter only if they had control. Others said no, and fierce competition ensued. Under guidance of Daniel, Solomon and Murry Guggenheim, the family made alliances with mine operators, lent them money, conciliated labor, and in two years the association was forced to capitulate. The Guggenheims took over.

They became interested in a copper mine in Chile which produced an ore difficult to refine. They developed in their laboratories a method for refining it, and it became a major part of their properties. They moved into the Anaconda Copper Co.

They had gold mines in the Yukon, tin mines in Bolivia, diamond fields and rubber plantations in the Belgian Congo, more copper mines in Alaska, and nitrate fields in Chile. All these were before the days of income taxes.

Financed Lindy's U. S. Flight

Millions of dollars of the family fortune went for philanthropy and for advancement of art, science and letters. Brother Daniel, intensely interested in aviation, which in his lifetime grew from a lone flight at Kitty Hawk, N. C., by the Wright brothers, to a terrible weapon of warfare, founded the school of aeronautics at New York University.

The Guggenheim Foundation financed Col. Charles Lindbergh's trip around the country after his triumphal return from the first solo flight across the Atlantic.

Solomon Guggenheim, throughout his life, was an active man, pursuing his interests with vigor, mental clarity and enterprise.

"Whatever enterprise you are in," he once advised young men, "you should be resourceful. Some people only see one way to do a thing, and they worry about it. But there are many different ways a thing can be done—and done successfully—if you're resourceful."

Asked once what was his business creed, he answered in one word:

"Integrity."

Begins Collecting Paintings

Soon after his marriage, his wife interested him in art, and he early began a collection of paintings. In his later years, at an age when most men turn conservative and look backward, he became intensely interested in modern painting, of the so-called "nonobjective" type.

As result, he began buying, and was reputed to have one of the outstanding collections of that type of art. He made extensive gifts of art to the National Gallery in Washington. He was deeply interested in and for some time president of Mount Sinai Hospital in New York.

Funeral services for Mr. Guggenheim will be at 3 p. m., Friday, at the Beth-el chapel of Temple Emanu-el in New York. Burial will follow at the Guggenheim Mausoleum, Salem Field Cemetery, Brooklyn.

Bay Mare Fiddles as 2 Cops Burn

The young bay mare, she ain't what she ought to be.

And two police privates from the 14th Precinct became sweaty and angry as a result.

At 8:30 a.m., yesterday, Pvts. Ernest W. Garner and Edwin Ruff noticed the animal, without harness, saddle, bridle or halter, grazing near 45th and Eads st. ne. Pvt. Garner left his scout car and approached her affably.

"Hello, horse," he greeted, "how'd you like to come with me and get some nice oats and bran and stuff?"

The horse cocked an eye at him, then started to walk away. After all, a perfect stranger—

Garner walked after her. She walked faster. He ran. She ran—faster than Garner. He took to the scout car.

Forty-five minutes later, after covering a substantial portion of the northeast section, the officers cornered the coy mare and looped a chain about her neck. They led her, then perfectly docile, to a stable at 1127 48th st. ne., pending appearance of her owner to claim her.

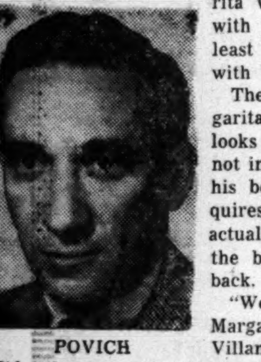
Villanova Favored Against Hoyas

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Bob Margarita, Georgetown's comparatively beardless head coach who got the job at 28, will present himself to the alumni tonight. It won't be under circumstances particularly to the taste of a new coach, who could have chosen a more favorable day to show off his product. Georgetown's opponent for the Alumni Homecoming is Villanova, at Griffith Stadium.



POVICH

"My boys will be trying awful hard, they're that kind," Margarita was saying yesterday, and if it was with no air of resignation there was at least the awareness that G. U. doesn't rate with Villanova.

The alumni who do meet up with Margarita will get an initial jolt. The fellow looks as if he belongs on the student rolls, not in the head coaching job. So boyish is his bearing, and countenance, that it requires a double-take to realize that the guy actually was the regular left halfback of the big, bad Chicago Bears a few years back.

"We might have had better luck," said Margarita. "Since that defeat by Tulsa, Villanova is upset-conscious. Actually, I'd rather be taking on an unbeaten team. In their mood, Villanova is sure to give us a hard time of it."

MARGARITA ISN'T presuming to teach the Hoyas the Bears' type of T-Football. "Naturally, I think the Bears were tops, especially with their kind of blocking and tackling. But we're working with college kids, after all. We can't use all of those variations of the T that we had with the Bears. I've put in the basic T, with its 22 plays, and that will win us some games, if we block and tackle."

Out of his desk he hauled his old notebooks of his days with the Bears. "Look at these," he said. "We had 22 ways to run right end. George Halas made us learn 31 different plays for sending the runner over right tackle. And there were 10 different plays on which we could send a man inside right tackle. We even had variations on our quarterback sneaks."

But the Bears' quarterback sneaks were few, Margarita added. "Sid Luckman wasn't fond of running the ball, you know. Nobody blamed him, because he was so useful in so many other ways. The happiest touchdown he ever scored, though, wasn't on one of his passes. It was the day the Giants had us tied 14-14 in the last quarter and Sid bootlegged the ball 25 yards around right end, all by himself, for the winning touchdown."

MARGARITA'S COACHING aides at the Hilltop go for the guy. There's no defeatist attitude despite the portent of Villanova. He had 'em in high humor yesterday with his schedule for the staff, posted on the coaching-room blackboard. It read: "8:00 a. m. to noon—Worry session. 12:00 to 1:00—Lunch. 1:00 to 3:00—Weeping session. 3:30 to 5:30—Practice. 6:30 to 1 a. m.—Explain to alumni last week's 42-0 defeat."

He'd be happier about tonight's ball game, he said, if his Georgetowns had more depth in the line. "If any more of our guys get hurt, we could have a rough evening. Right now, our top guards, Paul Wintermeyer and Bob Fortunato, won't even suit up, they're hurting so much. Neither will Bill Resch, our right end, or Art Sheridan, a regular tackle. That leaves us pretty thin."

Not only that, but Margarita tabs Villanova as the fastest team the Hoyas have met all season. "If we don't come up with our best defensive game, we could get mauled. But I couldn't ask for more of a try than our kids have been giving it all season. The way they came back after that beating by Maryland convinced me that they should never be underrated."

HIS SCOUTING reports haven't lessened Margarita's worries. "They tell me that Villanova's Steve Romanik is the best passer we'll face all year, and I thought I saw a couple of pretty fair ones in Ed Songin of B. C. and Dick Doheny of Fordham."

There's nothing very secret, either, about the ball-carrying power of the Wildcats' fullback, Ralph Pasquariello. "It says here," said Margarita, "that he's 6-1, weighs 240, and carries the ball 50 percent of the time when they aren't passing. One of the spots he likes to hit is right tackle, where John Sandusky is a 260-pound hole-opener."

In fact, Margarita doubts if Georgetown will trifle much with the big Villanova line. "We'll have to go into the air, I guess, and hope that Frank Mattingly has a good night. That's not giving away my secrets. But if we win the game, our defense will turn the trick, by holding Villanova to only a couple of touchdowns."

Anacostia And Coolidge Play Vital Game Today

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Anacostia, first in the Interhigh Football League's Southern Division, closes out its season against Coolidge today, and then sits back to wait hopefully for second-place Wilson to drop one of its three remaining games.

Anacostia is in a tough spot, even if it wins today's game on its home field. For Wilson can still win the Southern flag by sweeping its last three games.

INTERHIGH STANDINGS

NORTHERN DIVISION	W.	L.	T.	Pct
Central	3	0	1	.875
McKinley	3	0	1	.875
Coolidge	3	2	0	.600
Roosevelt	0	4	0	.000
Bell	0	4	0	.000
SOUTHERN DIVISION
Anacostia	3	1	1	.700
Wilson	2	1	0	.667
Eastern	2	2	1	.500
Western	2	2	0	.500
Chamberlain	1	3	0	.250

Today, Wilson takes on Roosevelt at Roosevelt, and in succeeding weeks, the Green Tigers clash with Western and Chamberlain. All three Wilson foes are far down in the standings.

Eastern at Central

Another top Interhigh game today finds Eastern at Central. Central has been weakened by the loss of Jimmy Pantos and will be only an even choice to keep its slate clean against Eastern.

McKinley Tech, tied with Central for the Northern section lead with 3-0-1 records, takes on a weak Chamberlain team, at Eastern.

All Interhigh games today start at 3 p. m., 15 minutes earlier than previously.

Cardozo High, defending champion in the Negro Interhigh league, plays Armstrong at 3 p. m. at Brooks Stadium in a game that should decide the league title.

If Cardozo wins, it moves into undisputed possession of first place but a win for Armstrong would throw the league into a four-way tie for the top spot among Armstrong, Cardozo, Phelps and Dunbar.

Six Night Games

Sherwood at Rockville and Blair at Hagerstown complete the afternoon slate.

Washington-Lee entertains Western in a non-league game tonight with Washington-Lee having its first-string backfield intact for the first time since its opening game.

Falls Church plays at Culpeper, Gaithersburg at Frederick, George Washington High at John Marshall of Richmond, Charlotte Hall at James Monroe of Fredericksburg, Va., and Fairfax at Lane of Charlottesville, Va., in other night games.

BALLHAWK—Georgetown's Tommy Hardiman, second leading pass interceptor in the country, takes one away from Jack Kivus (right) in practice. Lanky Hardiman, a centerfielder on the baseball team, will be ready for any Villanova passes that come his way at safety tonight at Griffith Stadium in the Hoya Homecoming against a heavy favorite

Army, Irish, Baylor Picks For Weekend

By Austin Bealmear

NEW YORK, NOV. 3 (AP)—Time for another whirl on the football guessing merry-go-round, with our average having jumped up to .789 on 321 correct predictions and 86 misses for the season after a lucky .850 stab last week. Associated Press rankings are in parentheses:

Notre Dame (1) vs. Michigan State (10)—The only game of the week involving two of the Nation's top ten teams. The Spartans, who have won five straight since losing to Michigan by four points, are fired with hopes of an upset. We trust the unbeaten Irish are aware of this. The secretary will cast the usual ballot for Notre Dame.

Fordham (20-tie) vs. Army (2) — When Army officials switched this one from New York's Yankee Stadium to their home base at West Point, little did they dream that the Rams would come into the game unbeaten and untied. No matter what the surroundings may be the honeymoon is about over for Fordham. The customary vote for Army.

Baylor (6) vs. Texas—Although Baylor has won all six starts to date and Texas has lost three of seven, this tussle is a toss-up. A Texas victory would leave Rice alone at the top of the Southwest Conference standings, but we'll string along wtih the unbeaten Bears. Baylor.

Washington State vs. California (4)—The all-victorious Pacific Coast co-champs should breeze through this one. California.

Purdue vs. Michigan (5)—You can't pooh-pooh Purdue anymore after last week's upset of Minnesota. But Michigan should hurdle the Boilermakers.

Virginia (19) vs. Pennsylvania (20-tie)—Now that the Quakers have had their perfect record spoiled by Pitt, they can do the same to the unbeaten Cavaliers. And they probably will, but good. Pennsylvania.

Arkansas vs. Rice (8)—Arkansas doesn't seem to be going any place in the Southwest Conference. Rice.

Iowa (15) vs. Minnesota—Iowa beat Purdue, which is more than Minnesota could do, but the Gophers aren't likely to drop three straight. Minnesota.

Navy vs. Tulane—Notre Dame beat Tulane by 39 points and Navy by 40. That gives Tulane a one-point edge here, but we think the margin will be somewhat larger. Tulane.

Running rapidly over the rest of the week-end's better games:

Big Wildcats Turn Loose Pasquariello Here Tonight

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Villanova, one of the strongest teams in the East, is spoiling to spoil Georgetown's football Homecoming in Griffith Stadium tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

The odds-makers think the visitors have an excellent chance of doing just that and have established them 21-point favorites.

A crowd of 10,000 is expected and the bulk of it will be rooting for the Hoyas' fifth victory in seven starts. Even the partisans realize it will take Georgetown's fourth upset—and perhaps biggest—to bag the decision.

SEASON RECORDS

GEORGETOWN			VILLANOVA
20	Holy Cross	13	35	Texas A. & M.	0
7	Maryland	33	27	Penn State	6
12	Wake Forest	6	34	Detroit	7
21	NYU	6	28	St. Mary's	20
10	Boston College	7	19	Tulsa	21
0	Fordham	42	28	Boston College	14

Tulsa Spoiled Record

This is a battered home club going against a powerful, veteran team. Villanova has scored six impressive victories in seven starts and only an unexplainable two-point defeat by Tulsa keeps it from the unbeaten ranks.

Georgetown's coming off its 42-0 thumping at the hands of Fordham with five good boys definitely out. Principally, the guard position has been hit with three men lost—Bob Fortunato, Paul Wintermeyer and Art Sheridan.

Fullback Johnny Hughes is recovering from a head injury suffered in the Fordham game and Bill Resch, best offensive end on the squad, is still sidelned.

Romanik Is Wildcat Passer

Steve Romanik, 6-foot-1, 190-pounder, directs the Villanova offense. One of eight seniors in the starting lineup, the Millville, N. J., husky ranks sixth nationally in individual total offense.

Passing is Romanik's forte. He has an ample supply of runners to hand off the ball to. Most prominent is Ralyh Pasquariello, bruising 225-pound fullback. Joe Rogers is the slippery left half and speedy, little Dom Frinzi also helps get the opposition in a frenzy.

Coaching Villanova is Jim Leonard, former Notre Dame great. Leonard, both a back and a guard for the Irish, won an Army game when he blocked a kick in the last minute as a lineman.

Leonard Ends Retirement

Leonard was wartime head coach of the Pittsburgh Steelers, head coach at St. Francis, Loretto, Pa., and assistant at Holy Cross.

As ever, Georgtonwn's offensive hopes rest on the throwing arm of Frank Mattingly, briliant soph quarterback who is 23d leading passer in the country, and Billy Conn.

DeWitt Denies Griff Made Bid For 2 Brownies

St. Louis, Nov. 3. (AP)—President Bill DeWitt of the St. Louis Browns denied today that Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators, has filed a bid to buy Brownie infielders Jerry Priddy and Bob Dillinger.

"I can't see how Grif can say that, in addition to players, we want lots of cash because we never have quoted him a figure," DeWitt said.

But Prouder of Unbeaten Rams

Shaughnessy Says He's Proud Of Washington's 'T' Offense

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

CLARK SHAUGHNESSY, who installed the T-formation in the Washington Redskin offense before becoming head coach of the Los Angeles Rams, is justifiably proud of the way it works with both clubs . . . Of course, the Redskins have won only two of their six games so far, while the Rams are unbeaten, but Washington's offense is the most productive in the National Football League—gaining 2367 yards . . . The tipoff is that, with all their yardage, the Redskins have scored only 135 points to the opposition's 174 . . . Los Angeles has scored 189 to its foes' 88.

"The Rams are the luckiest club I've ever coached," Shaughnessy said as he stopped in Washington en route to Hershey, Pa., where his Rams will train for Sunday's clash with the Philadelphia Eagles . . . "We haven't had a single major injury all season. The Redskins have had numerous, and that's one reason why they've lost three games and tied one. I give credit for our defense to three fast men in the secondary—Jerry Williams, Gabby Simms and Don Currivan . . ." Shaughnessy lays claim to being the oldest active coach, in point of service, in the country . . . He's only 57, but he's been a head coach since 1915, when he launched his career at Tulane . . .

THERE WOULD SEEM to be mutiny in the family of Art Rooney . . . whose Pittsburgh Steelers tangle with the Redskins at Griffith Stadium on Sunday . . . Rooney's club is the N. F. L.'s sole surviving single-wing outfit, yet Rooney's 16-year-old son is a T-formation quarterback . . . Young Danny performs with the North Catholic High team of Pittsburgh

Snead Still Leads by One In North-South

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 3 (AP).—Sam Snead clung to his one-stroke North and South Open golf tournament lead with a 2-under par 70 today for a 138 total for 36 holes.

Johnny Bulla, Pittsburgh professional, who began the day a stroke back of Snead hung on at that distance, matching Snead's 70 for 139 and second place, one stroke away.

In third place with 140 after a 69 today was National Open Champion Cary Middlecoff playing out of Ormond Beach, Fla. Hhis 36, 36 was the day's lowest round for the 6952-yard No. 2 championship course of the Pinehurst Country Club.

Only three strokes away at 141 came Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., veteran Denny Shute of Akron, Ohio, and Ted Kroll, Philmont, Pa.

Palmer, PGA runnerup to Snead this year, had 70 today as did Shute who won the PGA title on this same course 13 years ago. Kroll, tied for second as the round began, had par 72.

Low amateur was Harvie Ward, University of North Carolina student from Tarboro, N. C., the national intercollegiate champion had a 71 for 144.

Newcombe Topheavy Choice As N. L. Rookie of the Year

By Joe Reichler

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Don Newcombe, giant Negro pitcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was voted today the National League's rookie of the year in an Associated Press poll.

It was a landslide for the 23-year-old native of Madison, N. J. The 6-4, 235-pound righthander was picked on 105 of the 116 ballots cast by members of the Baseball Writers' Association throughout the major league cities.

The remaining 11 votes were scattered among six first-year men. Willie (Puddin' Head) Jones, hard hitting third baseman of the Philadelphia Phils, was runner-up with four votes. Del Crandall, youthful catcher who joined the Boston Braves in midseason, was next with three.

The remaining four votes were divided evenly among third-baseman Eddie Kazak, St. Louis Cardinals; outfielder Tom Saffell, Pittsburgh Pirates; second-baseman Mike Goliat, Phils, and third-baseman Pete Castiglione, Pirates.

Although he wasn't called up from Montreal until May 17, Newcombe won 17 games and lost eight to become the league's leading righthander. He ranked second only to Boston's Warren Spahn in strikeouts, fanning 148 to Spahn's 152.

Bombers Beat Bullets, 81-65

Baltimore, Nov. 3. (AP)—The St. Louis Bombers tonight defeated the Baltimore Bullets, 81-65, in Baltimore's first league home game.

Center Ed McCauley and Forward Marko Todorovich sparked St. Louis with 18 points each. Paul Hoffman was high for Baltimore with 17 points.

Ft. Wayne Whips Knicks, 87 to 72

Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 3 (AP).—The Fort Wayne Pistons opened their National Basketball Association campaign with an 87-72 victory over the New York Knickerbockers tonight.

New York sank 40 of 54 free throws but scored only 16 field goals. Fort Wayne held a comfortable lead all the way.

—Virginia Can Spring Osisek, Michels—

All's Not Lost if Penn Stops Papit

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Nov. 3.—Remember what happened to the Washington Caps last year when they concentrated too much on trying to stop George Mikan?

With all eyes glued on Mikan, Jim Pollard and others of the Minneapolis Lakers cast shot the Caps right out of the pro basketball championship.

A similar situation may take place on Philadelphia's Franklin Field Saturday when unbeaten Virginia butts heads with once-beaten Pennsylvania.

Fullback Johnny Papit, the Nation's leading runner, is Virginia's George Mikan in this case. And it's coach Art Guepe's fondest hope that the Quakers forgot there are others on his football team and spend all of their time trying to halt Papit.

"If that happens," Guepe says, "I think we'll show 'em a thing or three. We'll show 'em for instance that Steve Osisek can run and pass, that our quarterback, Whitey Michels, can throw the ball around, and that we are still alive even when Papit is stopped."

TO THAT END, Guepe has been working all week as the Cavaliers prepare for the big one. Several new pas splays—maneuvers on which Halfback Osisek passes, others which involve Michels have been installed for the Philadelphia struggle.

Guepe is determined and confident that the Quakers will have to contend with more than Papit if they are to leave the South without even one major unbeaten, untied football team.

Papit, the 190-pound fullback who sprints like a halfback, has averaged 7 yards a run in six games. That helped, of course. But not to be overlooked are the five touchdown passes Michels has thrown and the .500 average halfback Osisek has on his 12 aerial attempts.

"Rapid" Papit, as they've rechristened him here, came to Virginia most unexpectedly three years ago, and it's been the most pleasant shock the Cavaliers have enjoyed since Bill Dudley brought fame to Thomas Jefferson's school.

THE 190-POUND swiftie who'll be performing before a hometown audience Saturday, was rated one of the finest high school backs in Philadelphia history. He was sought by schools from coast to coast. Virginia figured it had about as much chance of landing him as it has of seceding from the Union again.

With Army on the inside track, Guepe had abandoned all hope of steering Papit to Charlottesville. A Virginia alumnus, however, came through for his alma mater. A Philadelphia resident quite smitten by Papit's prowess, the alumnus was the same gentleman who for three years had promised to deliver to Virginia every prize in Philadelphia but who had failed each time.

On a visit to Charlottesville, he once again boasted that he'd bring something special to his alma mater in the way of a football player. Tired of hearing the routine, Guepe wrote down the names of the top three high school players in Philadelphia.

GET THOSE THREE to come to Virginia," he asked, hoping that the impossibility of the task would not only dissuade the alumnus from bothering him that year, but for the future also.

One of the names on Guepe's list was Papit's. A month later the old grad came through—not with one player, but with all three. Two failed academically, but Papit is still around—and so is the old grad, from time to time.

In short—over 6000 Charlottesville residents will accompany the team to Philadelphia tomorrow morning. . . . Halfback Ralph Shoaf, a dandy open-field runner, practiced for the first time this week today. He suffered lime burns last week in the West Virginia game. . . . Two years ago, the Cavaliers were unbeaten and also had six in a row when they faced Penn. They were trimmed, 19-7. The Cavaliers have never beaten the Quakers in 14 tries and are 14-point underdogs to make no story.

Maryland's Rugged Defense Ranks Second in Nation

Colonials Better Take Up Passing

George Washington's changes of running through Maryland's line Saturday at College Park appear dim in view of National Collegiate Athletic Bureau statistics, announced yesterday.

The Terrapins ranks second in the United States in rushing defense and second in total defense.

By holding South Carolina's ground attack to a mere 67 yards last week, Maryland lowered its opponents' rushing average for five games to 69.8 yards. The Terps foes have averaged a total of only 156.8 yards per game.

FOR DEAR OLD G.W.—Charlie Gunner of George Washington demonstrates why it's mighty rough for a 165-pound guard to mix it on the football field with players almost twice his size. Gunner has lost eight teeth for good old G.W. in three seasons. Also, he's suffered a broken ankle, pulled ligaments in both his legs, and a dislocated shoulder. But he'll be in the lineup when the Colonials meet Maryland Saturday afternoon at College Park

Mrs. Torlinski Gets Nomination

The Women's District Golf Association yesterday nominated Mrs. M. J. Torlinski, Army-Navy Country Club to be president for the coming year, at a meeting at Columbia Country Club. Nomination is tantamount to election.

Mrs. Torlinski will succeed Mrs. W. F. Patterson, president for the last two years who did not seek reelection.

Others nominated yesterday were Mrs. Willard Edwards, Manor Country Club, first vice president; Mrs. Marie Spates, Prince Georges, secretary; Mrs. M. H. Dinneen, Washington Country Club, second vice-president; and Mrs. Vern Wilson, Columbia, treasurer.

Phelps and Carver battled to a 6-6 tie in a Negro Interhigh footfall game yesterday at Brooks Stadium.

Phelps scored in the first period on a 43-yard pass play from Tom Isley to Bill Freeman. A Herbert Barlino pass to John Barge was good for 30 yards and Carver's touchdown late in the second quarter.

GW Gets 4000 Tickets From Maryland

Maryland University has turned 4000 tickets for tomorrow's Maryland-George Washington game over to George Washington students, returning a favor G. W. extended last year when the Colonial-Terp game was played at Griffith Stadium.

Saturday at College Park

Terp Alumnus Who Founded Football at GW to See Game

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

GRANVILLE LEWIS, 74, is coming to College Park Saturday afternoon to see how much George Washington has improved since he started football at the G st. school in 1897.

However, Lewis will not take sides.

"The reason," he explains, "is that I played football at Maryland before I moved over to G. W."

There were no eligibility restrictions in those days because football, in its infancy here, was not recognized as a major sport. A player could transfer without any trouble.

After fullbacking Central's first Interhigh team in 1892, transferring to Business High and starting football there in 1893, Lewis moved out to College Park.

In those days, Maryland was known as Maryland Agricultural School. 1894, Lewis' first year there, was the third year of football at College Park, and he immediately made the team as fullback. In 1896, he was elected captain, which meant also that he was coach because no member of the faculty was trained to teach the boys the game.

One day in the fall of 1897, Don and Carroll Fugett, two former Lehigh football players, moved to Washington and enrolled at Columbian College, old G. W. They persuaded Lewis to transfer to Columbian and start football there.

The day after he transferred, the Fugetts moved to San Francisco, and Lewis took over as recruiting officer, treasurer, fullback, captain and coach.

LEWIS' PROBLEMS were many. One, which still is unsolved is finding a practice field. In those days, Lewis and his small gang trouped in uniform through downtown to an unoccupied, rock-strewn lot at 16th and H sts. nw. for practice.

"I have to laugh when the newspapers call G. W.'s 1949 team an 'iron man' outfit. Shucks, they have more than 30 men on the squad," Lewis says, "and they only have to play once a week.

"Back in 1897, we couldn't play any home games for lack of a field. And in order to support the program, our squad of 13 played as many as four road games a week.

"It's in the record. One week in the fall of '97, we played Virginia, Hampton, William and Mary and Richmond. We beat three of them too, losing only to Virginia, 4-6. In those days, touchdowns and field goals counted four points each, and conversions two."

Happy Gordon, Outrider, Dies

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 3.—Roy C. (Happy) Gordon, famous as a Maryland outrider, died this morning at the Pimlico race track after suffering a heart attack. The Baltimoran, 59, led many celebrated horses to the post during his more than 25 years in the position he relinquished seven years ago. He was employed at the Pimlico's receiving barn.

By Ralph Murdock

A WILD TURKEY kill of 125 has been reported to the conservation committee of West Virginia for the first five days of the hunting season which opened on October 16.

Murdock

Among successful hunters was Gov. Okey L. Pattison, who bagged a 10-pound hen in Pocahontas County.

Two 22-pounders were taken by William A. Kuykendall and H. J. Jordan.

Two hunting fatalities and four casualties were reported in one week. Two of the latter victims are still in serious condition. Oddly enough, four of the accidents occurred on opening day when four other hunters fired at what they mistook for squirrels in underbrush.

INCIDENTALLY, West Virginia was one of only three States to receive increases this year in federal funds for wildlife management purposes. The States' share which was distributed under the Pittman-Robinson Act was $162,403.55.

For the previous year, its license sales as used in computing its share totaled 301,000. Present indications. said the commission. are that its license sales during the present fiscal year will total around 324,000, an approximate increase of 8 percent.

FOUR STATES, in addition to West Virginia and the District of Columbia, were represented in the bow and arrow deer hunt on the Holly River state park which ended on October 19. A total of 232 archers competed.

Believe it or not, five of the fair sex entered. In the first eight days the archers bagged five deer. The five successful hunters were Austin Gates, Glen Fox, W. Dean Gorman, C. L. Cleavenger and Lee R. Fogg. The deer ranged from 55 to 135 pounds.

Week-End Suggestions

Rockfish — The tackle busters are in the Herring Bay Area. Pan size can be found from West River to Point Lookout.

Crappie — Pig Point Area. Boats and minnows available at Hills Bridge. Pig Point and Sunderland's landing.

Yellow Perch — Severn and South Rivers appear best.

NOTE — Happy times and tight lines are our predictions for the weekend.

AT PIMLICO

DEAR FOLKS: Pimlico Apprentice Jockey Dick Lawless who was rushed off to New England after he had made a good start at Laurel returns to Maryland next week and will ride out the season. Lawless rode four winners at Lincoln Downs the other day and may be the star of the Bowie meeting. However, few believe he can match the work of Clarence Picou last fall. King Ranch is going to start Just Eight in Saturday's Pimlico Futurity despite his poor showing Wednesday. He reared at the break, was off slowly and had little or no chance. With better racing luck, Trainer Buddy Hirsch believes the colt will be in the thick of battle for the 25 grand event. See you on the rail.—BILL

Fleettown Takes Second Going Away

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 3.—Trough Hill, owned by Mrs. S. C. Clark, jr., stamped himself as one of the Nation's top jumpers of eligible for "the steeplechase horse of the year" here today.

The 7-year-old ankled into the finish line 10 lengths ahead of the closest opposition in the twelfth running of the $7500 added Battleship Steeplechase Handicap.

Brookmeade Stable's Fleettown, half of the Trainer Arthur White entry, was second and 20 lengths in front of Graham Grant's Luan Casca, an English importation who surprised by winning by 30 lengths early this week. Only four others competed.

Trainer Jack Skinner scratched the Rokeby Stable's American Way before the test and placed his reliance in Trough Hill, a decision that was proved justified in a big way. The winner was clocked in 3:55 4/5 for the about two miles over 14 jumps. With the Fleettown-Larky Day entry the favorite, Trough Hill paid $11.80 to win.

The afternoon's best flat-race offering was the Charley O. Purse and the winner was the favorite, R. E. Carter's Oriole.

The son of Swing and Sway led Bobanet Stable's King Midas into the wire with daylight to spare. C. Mahlon Kline's Bayeux took the show from Frank Rankel's Flashco via the camera.

Oriole, ridden by Jockey Ira Hanford, paid $4 and was clocked in 1:45 for the mile and sixteenth over a fast track.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

THE MAYFLOWER LOUNGE, long convinced of its supremacy as the place to meet for lunch, is now cajoling the cocktail crowds. First it was "Six Fashions at Six," initiated a month ago and presented every Friday. The busy career girl, forgotten in the mad rush of local fashion shows at midday, was the target.

SMART

Now there's another inducement: His name is Dick Smart, and he's quite a handsome gent. Beginning Monday, at cocktail time, he with hold forth with every type of song known to the human voice, according to advance notices.

But chief among his offerings will be the chants and rhythms from his native Hawaii, and show tunes taken from his recent work on the stage.

GINNY BRADLEY, the sultry blues singer from Catholic University, is finishing up her stay at the Old New Orleans this Sunday.

The gal has polished up her technique considerably since her debut last June at the Wardman Park. Her voice has a quality which enhances the low tones of the blues songs. And the interpretations are terrific, as would be expected from the favorite of collegiate musical comedies.

Owner Nick Gaston is quite taken with his next attraction, Joan Dexter, who opens Tuesday, November 8, for two weeks.

A one-time soloist with Xavier Cugat, she has appeared intermittently on the Coca Cola radio network show. A starring role in light opera at Carnegie Hall, and appearance in New York night clubs and hotels, have otherwise kept the young coloratura soprano busy.

JAMES BRAHMS, coowner with Leonard Mitchell of Olmsted's Restaurant, had an old girl friends, Olga Ryss, drop into his place "from out of the past" the other day. She grew up in the same town in Sweden which both Brahms and Mitchell came from, and hadn't seen them for 20 years.

Known in Europe since the First World War as an opera singer, Olga Ryss is now general manager of the Opera House in Johannesburg, South Africa. It seems she is also known as a gourmet—their memories of the old days were told over mushrooms Suedoise and Filet Mignon Paradis, as Brahms decided to show off and had Chef Roux prepare a "gluttonous" meal.

He's not your son—

Why worry?

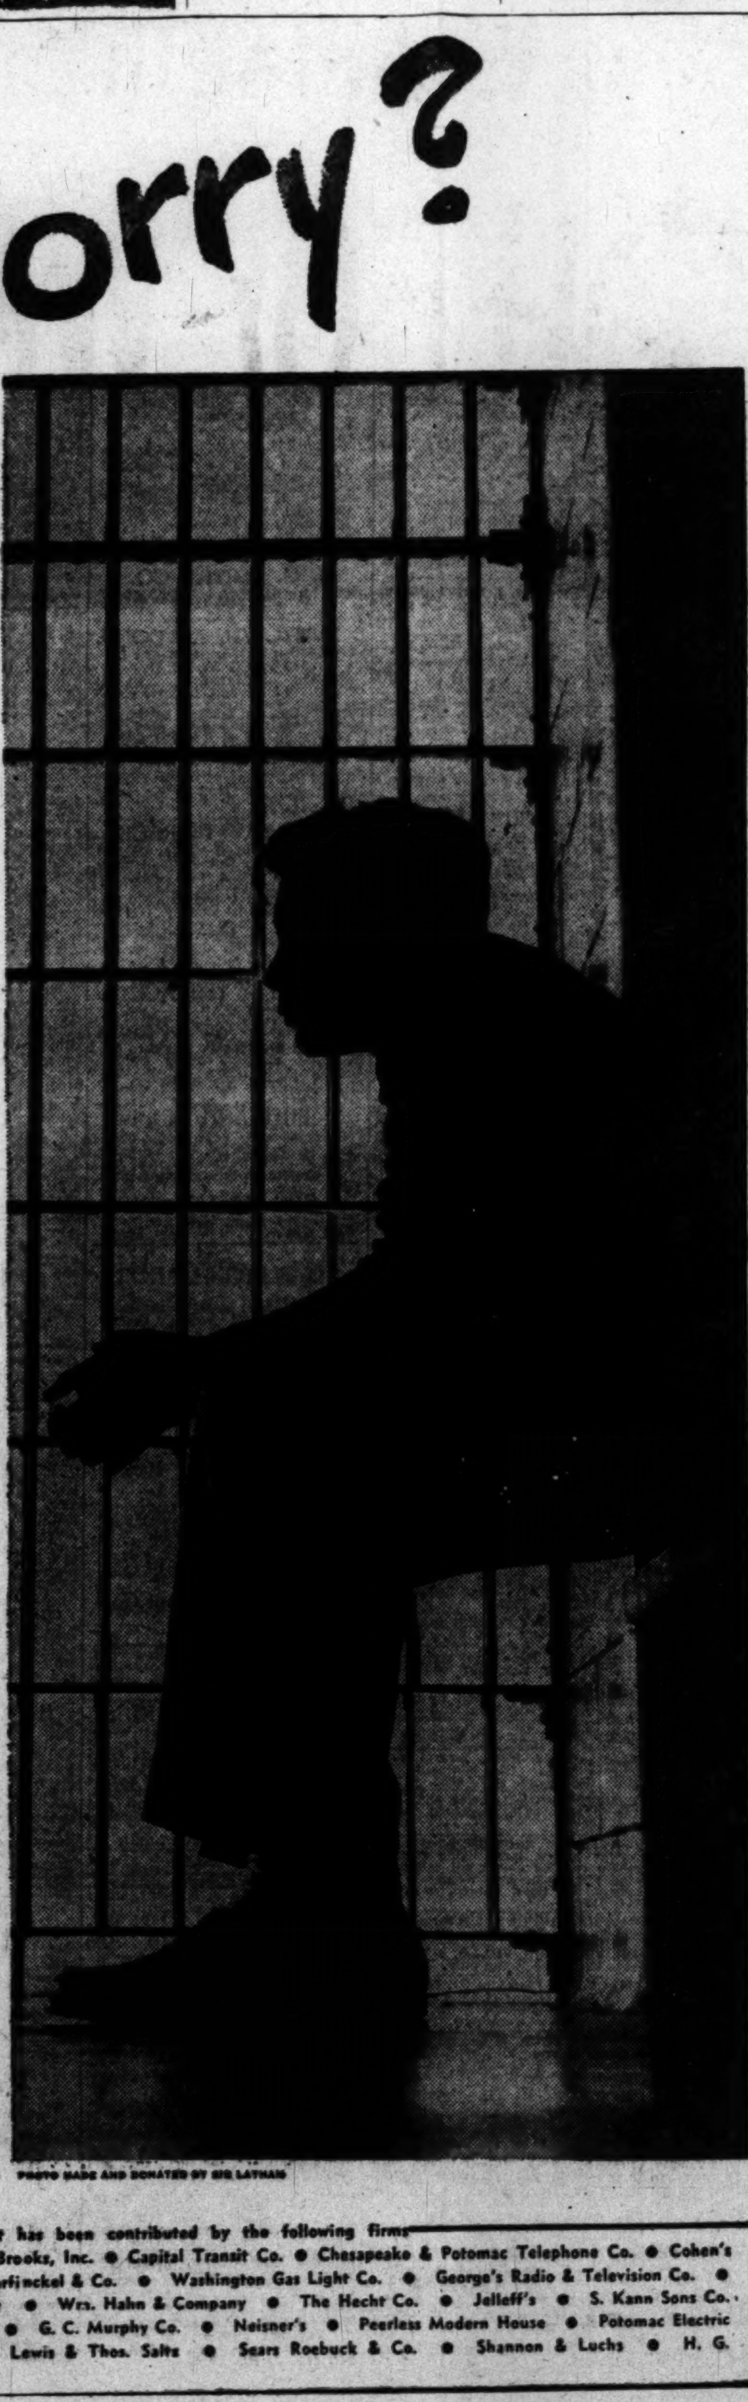

PHOTO MADE AND DONATED BY SID LATHAM

Why worry—when teen-agers at the rate of a thousand a day are getting into jams with the law?

Why worry—when right here in this country youngsters are being brought to court charged, not with pranks of mischief, but with robbery, assault, prostitution, rape and murder?

And it's getting worse! Last year, arrests of boys under 21 increased 10.5% over the year before. Arrests of girls under 21 were 30% higher than before the war. And more than half (55.7%, to be exact) of all persons charged with robbery—as well as 72% of those accused of stealing autos—were under 25 years of age!

So you and every other citizen jolly well OUGHT to worry. Because it is your community. Because juvenile delinquency spreads like plague . . . one mind influencing another . . . one kid foolishly trying to "follow the leader."

Records show that an unhappy home life is often responsible for most youthful crime. And that's just one place your Community Chest dollars can work practical wonders through the Red Feather services that offer family counsel . . . treatment of physical and mental illness . . . child guidance . . . family rehabilitation. And through helping provide the right places to play . . . gyms . . . craft workshops . . . clubs . . . neighborhood centers.

Few of your dollars ever had a chance to work harder for this community AND FOR YOU YOURSELF than the dollars you'll give to your Community Chest this week!

Remember—one pledge covers many Red Feather services. Because we have a well-managed Community Chest uniting many appeals, you are called on only once a year for all of them. So when you give, GIVE ENOUGH . . . enough for ALL Red Feather services . . . enough for a FULL year.

Everybody benefits . . . Everybody gives

Girl, 7, Unharmed In All-Night Ride With 2 Strangers

Mullins, S. C., Nov. 3 (AP).—A small daughter of a tenant farmer turned up unharmed today after an all-night ride with two strange men.

Mary Spivey, 7, was tired and hungry when taken into the rural home of George Rogers, 15 miles from the point where her school bus let her out on a roadside yesterday. It was there that she entered the car with the two men and drove off as schoolmates looked on.

Jerome Alford, 30, and Hugh Smith, 22, farmers, were in an undisclosed jail. A deputy said no charges had been preferred, and added:

"They'd been drinking."

He said the men had driven about the greater part of the night but had let the child out near the Roger's home.

Perle Planning To Give Senators A Big Welcome

Luxembourg, Nov. 3 (AP).—The United States Minister to the Grand Duchey of Luxembourg, Perle Mesta, is busy preparing her first large official party since she took over her job here.

A group of U. S. Senators on a fact-finding tour accepted her invitation to visit Luxembourg Friday. They will come here from Frankfurt.

All are members of the Armed Forces subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee. A reception and two dinners are among the events she has planned.

King George Examined

London, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Three physicians visited King George at Buckingham Palace today for what was called a routine checkup. He has been under close medical supervision since he suffered an obstruction of circulation in the arteries of his legs.

The Lyon's Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Judge Samuel Leibowitz practiced law in an office on lower Broadway. On the day he was to be sworn in as a judge, thus ending the most brilliant career in the history of criminal law in America, he absent-mindedly drove to his old office instead of to the court. He sat on the windowsill of the room from which everything had been moved, and stared out across the city, musing about the clients who once had come here, and of the last ones who just had offered a $300,000 fee. Then the phone rang. Leibowitz didn't answer. It rang again. He went to the medicine cabinet, and found only one razor blade. And while the phone kept ringing—the $300,000 call from Murder, Inc.—Leibowitz walked out of his office for the last time, and with the razor blade scratched his name from the door, then went to Brooklyn to take his jurist's oath.

George Jessel, in discussing British actors, said that the roles they can play are limited and that American actors have a wider range. Oscar Levant asked, "How about Ralph Richardson, Robert Morley and Laurence Olivier?" Jessel shrugged: "But can they play a half-breed?" . . . Jessel, incidentally, is discounting all the rumors which have been linking him with Joan Crawford. "She's lovely, but we couldn't have a serious romance," he said. "Women, especially when they're in love, like to tell a few lies. And I know Miss Crawford too well for her to be able to lie to me."

Jessel admitted, however, that his sentiments toward Greer Garson reached such heights that he asked her to marry him. "I know I must be genuinely in love with you," he confessed to her. "I am a man who for more than a generation has made a living by expressing myself in words. When I'm with you now, I find myself stammering and at a complete loss for words. Can you imagine Jessel in a spot where he finds he can't say anything?" . . . "Oh, you can speak, George," suggested Miss Garson. "Just think of me as a Benefit."

Otto Skorzeny, the Nazi specialist who once freed the captured Mussolini allegedly has disappeared from Munich where he was turned over for denazification. Bavarians believe that Skorzeny now is in the Argentine publishing Nazi literature which is sent to Bavaria. But American agents haven't been able to locate the easily identifiable, 6-foot-4 scar-faced Skorzeny.

The Cincinnati Symphony has commissioned Don Gillis, producer of the Toscanini show, to write a suite, "Thomas Wolfe, American."

At the Sadler Well's Ballet last week Garson Kanin was hit by a paper-plane fashioned from a program. On it was written: "How about letting me invest in your play, 'The Rat Race'?" It was signed by the show-angel, Howard Cullman.

SUSIE Q. SMITH

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Junior Moralist

"Daddy, you shouldn't use such words!" "Mother, I don't think it is very nice to talk about people that way." "You shouldn't leave the bathroom door open!" "The speed limit says 35 and you're going 37!"

Have you ever heard chiding comments like these from one of your growing-up children? It happens in the best regulated of families. Son or daughter suddenly decides that members of the family need to be set straight about some things. It may begin as early as 9 or 10 years of age and go on for what seems, at least, a long, long time.

Its not always easy to live with a junior moralist. One can, of course, follow the military pattern and "pull rank" on him by showing indignation that a "mere child" should question the behavior of his elders. One can use sarcasm—make fun of such a "goody-goody" approach. But it's probably better to live through the experience and try to realize that the youngster is attempting to develop standards and is experimenting by accepting temporarily at least, those he sees other individuals and other families following.

Taking him seriously, explaining that people have different ways of looking at and doing things and keeping from getting excited about the criticism usually will help the family get through this stage without too much friction.

What's the Verdict?

STOLEN CORN

Q. McCoy had a field of corn in a mountain valley. Before the corn was ripe, he sold the field to X, with no special understanding about the corn. When the corn was ripe, Hatfield, knowing he was trespassing, but thinking the field still was McCoy's, harvested the corn and made whisky of it. This increased its value 10 times. X now claims the whisky, in a law suit, and Hatfield denies he is entitled to it, saying all X is entitled to is the value of the product when it was still corn, not the increased value as whisky. Is he right?

A. The corn not having been ripe when the land changed ownership, and there being no special agreement about it, X acquired ownership of the corn when he bought the field. Hatfield, knowing he was trespassing, gained no title to it even by changing its character and increasing its value tenfold. X is entitled to the whisky or its value.—F. L. D.

Our Congress

The members of our Congress are . . . The men and women great . . . Who go to Washington each year . . . From each and every state . . . The many representatives . . . Including old and new . . . The pompous senators who are . . . Comparatively few . . . They sponsor resolutions and . . . The bills they introduce . . . And after many arguments . . . They try to reach a truce . . . Of course there are the cloakrooms and . . . The lobbies by the score . . . Infrequent filibusters and . . . The deals behind a door . . . But Congress is the color of . . . Our democratic way . . . A system that has never failed . . . And that is here to stay.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Is All Mixed Up and Feels Urgent Need Of Guidance As His Love for Girl He Thinks Ideal Begins to Shade Off Into Cold Dislike

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I never dreamed I would ever be writing to you for advice, possibly because I have been so happy this past year. But now I am all mixed up and need guidance urgently.

For the past year I have been going with a girl who has all the qualities I want in a girl—appearance, taste, manners, breeding, everything except accord in matters of opinion. Differences of opinion in small trivial things has caused, I think, a gradual dislike and coldness between us, but it might be something else.

I have been genuinely in love with Anna and she is much in love with me still, but this cold indifferent feeling has taken hold of me gradually for the past three months. All day long I look forward to seeing her, but when evening comes and we go to meet, I feel sick inside, as if something is squeezing my heart.

He Can't Imagine Life Without Her

I JUST can't go on hurting her. She is too fine a girl. But still I can't see myself without her. It is not as if somebody else has come between us. That isn't so. And if Anna can't suit me I don't know who can.

A year ago you couldn't have made me believe this could happen. I was so sure and happy and now I am so disappointed and discouraged with myself, as I think the trouble must be me. Just what do you suggest? I shall appreciate any advice you may give.

T. B.

Is He Fighting Off Surrender?

DEAR T. B.: You say Anna has all the qualities you want in a girl—taste, manners, breeding, etc., which indicates that your ideal is a conventional portrait of a lady. At least, that's what you think you want, the ideal you were brought up to revere, no doubt, perhaps because your mother, grandmothers or other influential female relatives are that type.

Having observed Anna to be the personification, seemingly, of those "refined" attributes you were schooled to love and respect, possibly that's why you felt at first that she was your dream girl. But then as association grew routine, perhaps you began to draw her into your longstanding emotional quarrel with certain authoritative ladies in your past history who probably bossed you firmly without regard to your feelings,—and maybe still do.

In other words, it could be that both your crush on Anna and your contradictory dislike of her issue from a situation of mistaken identity—in which you confuse her with figures that exist in your fancy and family background, and don't take into account her real self at all. This is fairly common practise in human relations,—a matter of blindly projecting one's "conditioned" emotions at others, while failing to see the truth of things.

Desires, Fears Are in Conflict

However, it is equally possible that your hostile reaction to Anna of recent months may reflect a panicky instinct to ward off growth of mutual love, so as to avoid the self-surrender of that experience. Many persons who have been emotionally hurt by severe treatment or habitual misunderstanding in early years of family relations, unconsciously dread the possibility of loving unguardedly in after years, lest their most sensitive feelings be punished again.

Your sick sensation of something squeezing your heart as you set forth to meet Anna suggests tremendous anxiety, and when one feels urgently anxious without known reason, usually the tension is caused by hidden conflict between desires and fears.—so you may be fighting hunger for Anna in fussing with her. Case of playing safe by keeping cold—or trying to.

In any case, it seems your emotional troubles are chiefly internal. And to get the cards on the table and sorted out, you need personal guidance from a good psychologist, because there's hardly anything told in your letter—except that you are very nervously on the defensive in relation to love or sex or womankind.

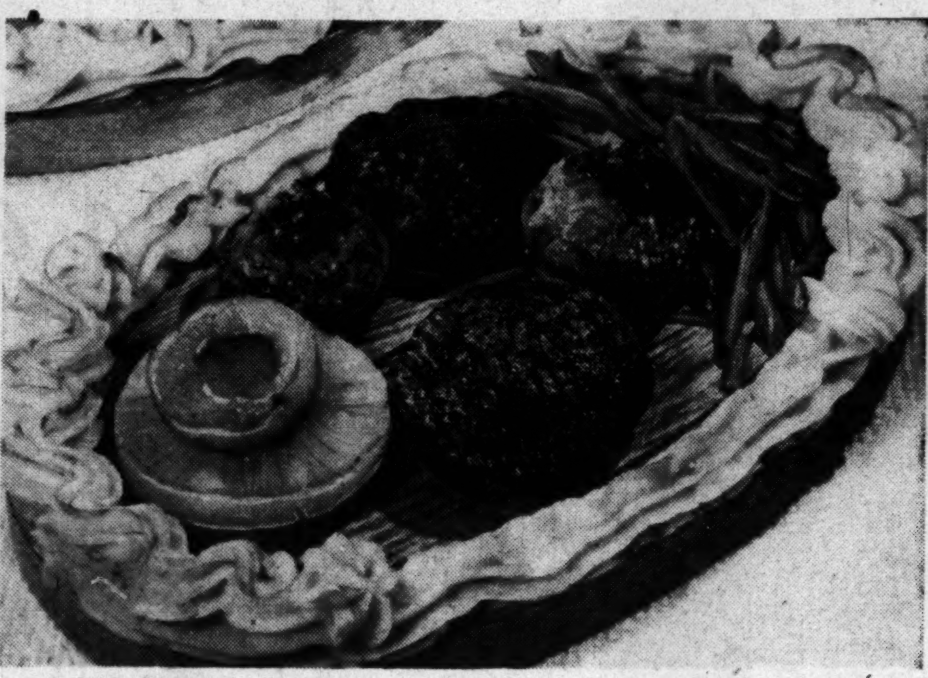
Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.



HAMBURGER really arrives in style when it's served on a plank with delectable stuffed mushrooms as companions. Julienne-style green beans, a ruffle of mashed potatoes, and broiled apricot and pineapple complete the mouth-watering ensemble

Meat of Many Moods

No Matter How You Chop It, It's Still Hamburger—and Versatile!

By Lucia Brown

HAMBURGER can play dozens of roles—come to the table as pie or tamale, on plank or bun, in casserole or cabbage leaf—and always acquit itself with credit.

There's no other food that is so versatile, helps you to save face so easily and cheaply. Take a pound of it—or even a half pound—and you can stir up a dish that you'll be proud to offer to any company.

Some people prefer buying round steak or an even fancier cut and having it ground in a special way. Thriftier souls take it readymade from the meat counter. But no matter how you chop it, it's still hamburger and the basis for many a tasty dish.

One you might like to try is Pinwheel Meat Loaf seasoned with sage and striped with tender spaghetti. Serve it with tomato sauce, buttered peas, and small cooked onions. (You can buy 'em in a can nowadays.) A shortcake made with canned sliced peaches could top off the menu.

PINWHEEL MEAT LOAF

(Serves four)

1 tablespoon salt
4 ounces long spaghetti
½ cup milk
1 pound hamburger
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon powdered sage
3 quarts boiling water
½ cup dry bread crumbs
¼ cup chopped onion
1 egg, beaten
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Tomato sauce

Add 1 tablespoon salt to actively boiling water. Gradually add spaghetti and boil until tender (about 12 minutes). Drain and rinse. While spaghetti is soaking, soak bread crumbs in milk. Add onion, hamburger, egg, salt, pepper and sage. Mix well. Spread out on wax paper to form a rectangle 8 by 12 inches. Cover with spaghetti. Roll up like a jelly roll. Place in greased loaf

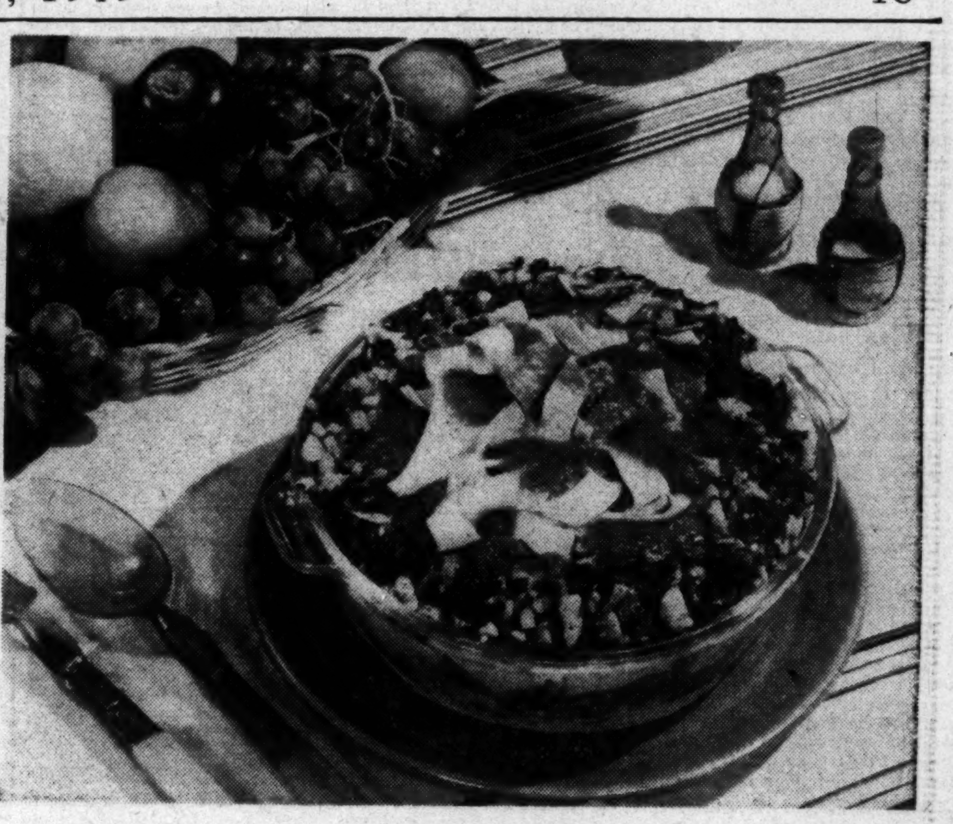
CENTER of attraction on this platter is Pinwheel Meat Loaf, made by rolling up hamburger and spaghetti in jelly-roll fashion.



ONLY a half pound of ground meat is needed for this thrifty but festive dish—Hamburger Noodle Casserole. Nuts and cheese add flavor and protein and there's a bit of tomato sauce in it, too

It's a dish that you can prepare and serve in 45 minutes or less. Flanked by a good salad and some hot bread, it makes a filling and delicious meal, that needs only a light ice cream dessert to top it off to perfection. See the accompanying story for the recipe for this casserole

Market Memo:

Fresh Pork Best Buy In Meats

THIS little pig and a lot of his brothers are still coming to market, so fresh pork is your best meat buy again this week. The wholesale price on pork loins is now at its lowest point since OPA.

SMOKED HAMS AND PICNICS rate as second best buy. The high prices on good quality beef have eased a cent or two and lamb is also slightly cheaper.

PEAR WEEK, being observed this week, points up the prevalence of fine D'Anjou, Bosc and Comice pears. Seventy-five per cent of the fresh pears on the market are served for "outof-hand" eating, but you can make many delicious dishes with them. One you'll like is baked pears. Make it by peeling and coring pears and putting them, cut side down, in a baking dish with a little water and lemon juice. Bake covered at 375 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes, then turn pears and sprinkle with sugar. Return to oven to glaze and finish baking. Serve hot or cold.

CITRUS from Florida is coming in increased quantity. Prices

Deficient Diet Gives Child Odd Cravings

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The appetite for uneatable materials which some children exhibit may stem from two sources. Children are not discriminating about what they put in their mouths and do not, until taught, have the same distaste for dirt that influences adults. They put almost anythi into their mouths and they may develop a taste for this nauseating material.

It may be caused by some dietary deficiency which may cause the child to find satisfaction in eating materials which are not regarded as food. This habit should not be ignored but should be dealt with through education and improvement in the diet.

By the Handful

Mrs. C. H. says her 18-month-old daughter eats sand and dirt constantly. "She actually crams it into her mouth by the handfuls. She is 31 inches tall, weighs 24 pounds and is quite chubby.

"She has one of the prepared baby cereals for breakfast. At lunch she has fruit, vegetables, bread and butter and for supper she has cereal or an egg, bread, butter and milk. This is supplemented by numerous graham crackers and milk between meals.

"Is this diet adequate? Is there something lacking in it which makes her crave dirt? I forgot to say that every other day she has strained meat with her vegetables. She still takes a bottle. I will certainly appreciate your advice."

Her diet should contain an egg or meat, or both, every day. She should have a dessert of gelatine, or custard each day and thus increase her protein intake. It might be wise to eliminate the between-meal crackers and milk temporarily and the bottle permanently

Try salting her food a little more heavily; some mothers never think of tasting the canned foods they serve to see if they are appetizing. More salt may be helpful to this appetite for dirt. See that she has a multiple vitamin daily.

When she goes out to play watch her closely and the moment she puts dirt or sand near her mouth whisk her in the house. Explain that she cannot play outdoors if she eats dirt or sand.

When Teen-Agers Should Rise

There is a time when all teen-agers should stand on their own two feet. That is when it comes to introductions. There are a few rules that always remain the same, others that change according to circumstances, says the Woman's Home Companion.

For instance, a young person always rises when he or she is introduced to an older woman or a clergyman.

And certainly no young woman wants to stay seated when she is introduced to a group of people that are all standing. This is just an extra thought—you'll have lots more fun at parties if you keep circulating instead of settling down in a corner.

Greeks Have Word: Welcome

Dynamic Mme. Tsaldaris, Due This Week, Scarcely Allowed Time to Primp

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

DYNAMIC Mme. Constantine Tsaldaris is due at the Royal Greek Embassy this weekend. During a brief visit, the wife of the Greek Vice Premier and Foreign Minister and chief Delegate to the United Nations will scarcely find time to powder her nose, so many entertainments have been arranged by Mme. Dendramis.

Mme. Tsaldaris is no stranger to Washington. She lived here some years ago when her first husband, Agamemnon Schliemann, was Charge d'Affaires for Greece.

Possessed of a really lovely voice, she was noted for her ability in amateur dramatics—and for her amazingly long, golden hair!

Her first husband was the archeologist son of the noted German archeologist who discovered the lost city of Troy. He loved Greece so much that he married a Greek and became a citizen of Greece. Nowadays Mme. Tsaldaris, who also made her personal mark as an archeologist, is more interested in Greek relief and in promoting the sale of Greek handiwork.

Noted Designer, Aide Coming

SPEAKING of Greeks—Jean Desses, the Greek couturier who has achieved such sensational success in Paris these past few years, is arriving in Washington en route to Hollywood. He will be honored at a reception given by Mme. Vassili Dendramis, wife of the Greek Ambassador, on Tuesday.

Svelte, chic Mme. Dendramis, incidentally, is M. Desses' best advertisement on this side of the Atlantic. Mme. Lillia Ralli, who is directrice of the Desses' boutique—or readymade shop—is accompanying her boss.

Mme. Ralli, who's so tiny she's nicknamed "The Mosquito," is a well-known figure in what's vaguely called the international set. She is an intimate friend of both the Duchess of Kent and her sisters, Princess Olga of Yugoslavia and Countess Jettenbach-Torring.

Cliveden Set Is Set-Back

BULLETINS from Britain bring some fascinating gossip—namely that Lord Astor has left his wife, Lady Nancy Astor, unobtrusively and unexpectedly, leaving behind a letter saying that in future he wants to live in a small house on his son's place—in peace. This leaves delightful, energetic Lady Astor in full possession of the famous Astor house, Cliveden.

Peter Beatty, younger son of the famous sea lord, who recently committed suicide because of impending blindness, willed his country place, one of the most beautiful in England, to his half-nephew, young Michael Tree.

Michael, grandson of the late Lady Beatty, is a son of Ronald Tree by his first wife, who was Nancy Perkins, Lady Astor's niece. This gesture is particularly nice since Michael's mother decorated the Beatty house which he now inherits. On November 3, Michael married Lady Ann Cavendish, one of the Duke of Devonshire's daughters.

A number of forehanded gift-givers have written this department asking what to send British friends for Christmas. Inquiry at the British Embassy brought the following response:

"Any kind of meat, butter, bacon, rice, sugar, 'sweeties' and Mazola oil for cooking. They do particularly well with rice and the oil. There's no duty on the other end if the package is marked 'unsolicited gift'."

Dukes Bound for Argentine

WHEN bachelor Stanton Griffis takes up his job as Ambassador to the Argentine, he'll take along as personal assistant Angier Biddle Duke. Margaret Duke, naturally, will accompany her husband and will, to all intents and purposes, act as Ambassador Griffis' hostess.

Angy Duke, who's more familiarly known as "Bunny," is an enterprising young man who for some years has headed an import-export business trading mostly with Latin America.

He's better known, in less serious circles, as proprietor of the "Duke Box," a bachelor establishment created from an old-fashioned stable on the Dukes' glorified farm at Southampton.

The "Duke Box" inhabitants, headed by New Yorker Artist Alajalov and the Sherry-Netherland's kindly Col. Serge Obolensky, have done much to enliven Southampton and give its more decorative feminine element an even better time.

Margaret Duke, who took up painting several years ago, has progressed so remarkably that she's having a "one-man" show this month at the Feragil Galleries in New York. Mrs. Duke is a very positive character and her encounters with Evita Peron should be memorable. At any rate, Stanton Griffis is sure of having his entertaining done in the most creditable manner and the Dukes should help him over any bumps he's liable to encounter.

Watch Fashions

Fashions in lapel watches seem to reflect, in some way, the thinking of their times. In past years they have taken the form of such things as insects, padlocks, crosses, coffins, anad even a death's head, according to the Jewelry Industry Council. The trend today seems to be toward lighter and more pleasant subjects, however. The passing of the hours is marked by watches which are disguised as windmills, sunbursts, ballerinas bow-knots and "beating hearts."

Science Tackles the Unhappy Marriage

Counselors Give Service to the Middle-Aged

This is the fifth of a series of six articles on marriage problems.

By Gerald W. Johnson

WHEN marriage counselors are mentioned many people think exclusively of someone who advises high school and college students, brides and grooms, and brand-new parents.

We admit that marriage counselors may be good for Junior and Sis; but who thinks of Uncle Emil, who is as bald as Aunt Lib is gray?

They were married in 1924 or earlier; after 24 years, can anybody tell them anything about married life?

You would be surprised! Many of the toughest problems laid before the counselors are brought in by middle-aged people; but they are some of the most interesting problems, too. Because if you can trace the difficulty back to its beginning, you frequently have a beautiful example of how events work out.

Not many marriages of middle-aged people break down because of recent happenings. It is possible, of course.

Once in a great while Uncle Emil, at 55, develops a sudden passion for the racetracks and lands in the penitentiary through betting the company's money on a so-called horse that ran eighth in a field of half a dozen.

Once in a great while Aunt Lib, also in the fifties, suddenly goes off and joins a cult of snake-handlers.

Roots Are Far Back

BUT such cases are rare. As a rule the trouble that blows up a marriage that has lasted a quarter of a century had its beginning long years before and crept up on the victims like a slow hardening of the arteries. That may never kill a man outright, and yet render him steadily less capable of doing himself or anyone else any good.

Divorce among the middle-aged is based on sex difficulties much more frequently then people with conventional training would suppose, which means that the number of the middle-aged who are made unhappy in that way must be appalling.

Thousands drag along miserably, thinking nothing can be done about it, when something can be done.

Both Must Be Reasonable

THE most experienced and capable marriage counselors are firmly convinced that there is no necessary time limit on marital happiness.

Certainly it takes a certain amount of care and patience on both sides; but that is true of any sort of human relationship. Everyone admits that both parties must be reasonable to make a business partnership last a lifetime.

So it is with such slight relationships as a joint interest in a sailboat or a hunting dog. Why, even a barber-shop quartet cannot sing together for years without a certain amount of give-and-take among its members.

Then a man and a woman who will not go to some trouble to obtain happiness don't deserve it. There are not many like that. Most of us would be willing to go to a great deal of trouble if we thought that by doing so we might make happiness on the downhill slope of life as certain as it was on the upgrade.

The marriage counselors assert flatly that it can be done in many, perhaps in most, cases if the parties concerned go about it in the right way. But is not always easy to discover the right way when a marriage has grown so cold and languid that it is more dead than alive.

Have More Common Sense

ON THE OTHER HAND, Uncle Emil and Aunt Lib frequently have more hard, common sense than Junior and Sis. They are less easily discouraged by a first failure. Therefore some marriage counselors find them easier to handle with success than younger people.

At any rate, this branch of knowledge is far indeed from being serviceable only to youth.

Old people, as well as young ones, suffer from ignorance; and suffer even more from knowing so much that isn't so. It never hurt anyone to correct his false ideas; and it has helped enormously a great many people who had reached an age at which they supposed that life couldn't hold much more happiness for them.

The modern marriage counselor strives to reduce the divorce rate, but not by opposing divorce.

His attitude is that of a family physician toward a major operation; he will not recommend it until every other reasonable treatment has been tried and failed; but he will not oppose it as a last resort.

For if his thesis is correct, a large proportion of divorces are not necessary because the malaises that brought them on could have been cured by other means.

Not all, of course—there are a few people who are incapable of either finding or giving happiness in the marriage relation. But they are rare.

The assertion at the beginning of this series is the very basis of the marriage counselor's work in the world—the assertion that, fully instructed and properly warned, the average person will succeed.

Tips on Paint And Accessories

For the fall paint job:

Buy a good brush that will not shed its bristles all over the paint.

Put the brush in a can of turpentine or water between usings to keep it soft.

Don't neglect to have a clean cloth dampened with turpentine right by you to wipe up spilled drops immediately.

Mrs. America Stacks Up Against 'Miss'

By Ida Jean Kain

SPEAKING of figures, I would like to have the last word in the argument as to who has the better, the ultra-streamlined Miss America or the curvaceous Mrs. America—and whether a woman to be really beautiful must be married and a mother.

Jacque Mercer of Arizona, who has been crowned Miss America, is 18 years of age, 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs a slim 106 pounds and has these measurements: bust 34 inches, waist 22 inches and hips 34 inches.

Mrs. Frances L. Cloyd of California, the winner of the Mrs. America title, is 23 years of age. She is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs a neat 127 pounds and measures: bust 36½, waist 26 inches and hips 36 inches.

I take off my hat to Mrs. America, the mother of three children. Her figure could well be a model for American matrons. It is interesting to know that last year she was runner-up for the title and that her third baby was born just seven weeks before this contest—and still she has a figure that measures like Esther Williams' who has one of the loveliest forms in films. Well, it just goes to show what determination and a little exercise can do, and definitely proves that having a baby need not ruin a woman's figure.

Jacque Rated Trophy

THE current Miss America is a natural, too. While Jacque Mercer is the smallest girl chosen in some time, perhaps ever, she is slim, not thin. When I first saw the statistics, I mentally condemned the judges for choosing an underweight girl, for Jacque is below normal weight for her height. But after seeing her in the newsreel, I readily admit the judges had an eye for pulchritude. She is lithe and lovely and certainly looks healthy.

The average girl in her teens and twenties, however, should not conclude that she herself is overweight in comparison with our Miss America, for that doesn't follow. Most girls of 5 feet 4 inches weighing as little as 106 pounds, would have a one-cylinder look across the chest and their legs would be skinny. The only measurement where Jacque is ultra-streamlined is the waist. Her other measurements are in line with normal weight—she has curves with a tiny waist.

Here's Heavenly Average

HERE is a composite of all the Miss America title winners: height 5 feet 6½ inches, weight 124⅜ pounds, bust 34¼ inches, waist 24⅝ inches, hips 35⅛ inches, calf 13⅛ inches, ankle 8⅛ inches . . . brown hair, blue eyes and a trifle over 18. There are no statistics on the average Mrs. America.

As to the argument that a woman to be truly beautiful must be married and a mother . . . Jacque and all her lovely predecessors explode that theory. We suspect the angle was cooked up by some enterprising press agent anyway, for both winners fit their crowns beautifully.

Utilitarian Course

The custom of serving a sherbet in the middle of a meal may seem odd, but it was introduced centuries ago in order to permit the servants time in which to wash the forks for the next course.

How to Protect Your Mirror

Never hang a mirror where it faces a glare of light. The back of the mirror should be protected so that no light or water can possibly enter. When cleaning, be careful about using so much water that it trickles under the frame. A semi-dry method of cleaning is preferable. Hang the mirror where it adds to the size as well as attractiveness of the room.

A couple of well-hung mirrors can do wonders for the small living room.

New Fashion Refrain:

'On Her Hat, She Wore a Bow of Ribbon'

By Peggy Preston

NEW IDEAS in hats are hard to come by. But Florence Reichman, spritely chapeau artist, has come through with one that is refreshing, if not actually new. She's saying it with ribbons.

In town the other day from New York with a new batch of bonnets, Miss Reichman proved that the ribbon touch is the answer to our mid-season hat blues. She uses all kinds and colors to touch up dark felts, and at times, lets the ribbons compose the entire hat.

All the Reichman hats are small, in accordance with the fashion dictate, but big bows of ribbon take many of them out of the flat, cloche class. A tiny black feltsuit hat, for instance, is given a great lift with a wide drape of crimson taffeta that begins at the back of the crown and ends in a fly-away bow at one side.

Flowers Bloom in Fall

One of the prettiest of the ribbon hats is made of pale green plaid taffeta. And, a welcome sight in this flowerless season, is a spray of white flowers across the brim.

These little hats, varied and comfortable, belong to no particular time of year. They are as handy to own in June as in December, and go with every type of costume. Right now they are novel with furs and suits. Next summer they'll top off chambrays and shantungs.

Diamonds on Display

DIAMONDS—one million dollars worth of them—are on display at the new jewelry store of Charles Schwartz & Son in Silver Spring. But visitors, lured there by the spell of precious gems, will find the diamonds only a part of an extensive exhibit.

Included in the display are all the material necessary to illustrate the story of diamonds from the mines to the consumer. There are pictures of mining operations, cutting and polishing equipment, rough gems on loan from museums and diamond ore from South Africa.

Schools Are Invited

The exhibit is under the direction of Miss Susanne Steinem, who knows all there is to know about diamonds. An alumna of Smith College, she has studied geology, lithology, mineralogy and the specialized fields of optical mineralogy and the physics of light, according to our informant.

School and civic groups are especially invited to visit the display, which will be in progress through Saturday, in the large basement display room of the shop. The management announces that the room will be available, free of charge, to clubs for exhibit purposes. Those interested may call Mr. Goodwin at JUniper 7-7711.

School and civic groups are especially invited to visit the display, which will be in progress through Saturday.

There has been a change of signals on the weekly fashion show-luncheons at Hotel 2400. Miss Pearl Atkinson, director, is staging them now each Wednesday, instead of on Saturday as in the past. The time—1 p. m.

FINE WOOLENS are your best fashion friends from now until spring. Light, beautifully woven broadcloth such as is used in this suit, is an especially good choice this year. Here it is made into a tailored costume, with Paris-inspired shoulder pockets, and trim shawl collar lined in velvet. May be ordered at Frances et Frances

Mrs. Ruth Rock to Be Speaker At Catholic Forum Here Nov. 11

MRS. RUTH CRAVEN ROCK, former executive secretary of the National Council of Catholic Women, will be the only woman speaker and the only lay speaker at the Catholic University Forum to be held here next week.

MRS. ROCK

The forum, which will be held at 2:30 p. m. in the Sapphire Room of the Mayflower Hotel, November 11, will deal with the general theme, "The Clergy and Laity in Catholic Social Reconstruction."

Speaking with Mrs. Rock will be the Rev. Paul H. Furfey of Catholic University, the Rev. Dr. George P. Jacoby of New York City, the Rev. Dr. Francis W. Carney of Cleveland, and the Right Rev. Msgr. P. J. McCormick, rector of Catholic University.

A native of Washington, Mrs. Rock attended Trinity College and Catholic University. She worked with Catholic Charities of Washington, and later with the Holy Cross Foreign Mission Society. In 1937, Mrs. Rock became associated with the National Catholic Welfare Conference. In 1941 she joined the staff of the National Council of Catholic Women.

During the summer of 1947 Mrs. Rock represented the council at the Congress of the International Union of Catholic Women's Leagues in Rome, and then made a trip through displaced persons camps in Germany. She also served on the committee of the NCWC National Catholic Resettlement Council and has been secretary to the National Committee on the Status of Women.

PAUL PARNES made this wool coat dress of lightweight worsted plaid with its leather belt and row of big buttons. Colors combine light gray with oxford; and brown with beige. Available at Frances et Frances

Jobé Says... Costume Rings In Vogue Again

EVERY once in a while a vogue for costume rings sweeps over the fashion world. It looks as if we were in for one now, and I for one am very glad of it. For I think that rings are perhaps the most feminine jewelry fashion of all.

The new costume jewelry rings are quite different from the huge hunks of colored stone that were the fashion the last time rings were in. The smartest are big smooth pearls set in a simple band, and it's ultra smart to wear two rings at once—one white pearl and one gray. Big modern-looking gold rings in domes or twisted knots are very new; so are smooth cabochon semi-precious stones in heavy gold settings.

CARE Head Star of Shouse Luncheon

By Marie McNair

MR. AND MRS. JOUETT SHOUSE had a few guests lunching with them yesterday, with Paul Comly French of New York as the bright particular star. In the group were Col. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle.

Plans were discussed with Mr. French, who's head of CARE, for the campaign opening of the General Clay Fund for German Children on November 15 in New York. Mrs. Shouse is national chairman of the committee.

General Clay, former Military Governor of Germany, will speak over the radio on opening night. Other committee members are John J. McCloy, American High Commissioner in Germany, and Mrs. McCloy; Mr. and Mrs. Ogden R. Reid of New York, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Carey, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Graham and Mr. and Mrs. James S. Knowlson of Chicago.

Yesterday's Parties

MAJ. GEN. RUSSELL MAXWELL, USA, retired, and Mrs. Maxwell celebrated their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary with a reception at the Sulgrave Club yesterday.

General and Mrs. Murray, who now live in New York, were stationed in Washington for several years and so decided to give their reception here, where they have many friends both in and out of the service. They are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor.

Among those offering congratulations were Gen. Wade Haislip, member of the 1912 class at West Point with General Maxwell, and Mrs. Haislip. Other guests included Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Mrs. Bradley; Gen. and Mrs. Carl Spaatz, Gen. and Mrs. Everett Hughes, Gen. and Mrs. A. B. Quinton.

Champagne bubbled throughout the afternoon. Taking turns at the coffee service were Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. Rudolph M. Kauffman, Mrs. Levi Cooke and Mrs. Hutchinson Cone.

With her gown of black Chantilly lace over taffeta, Mrs. Maxwell wore a jade necklace and earrings to match. The jewelery was a gift from her husband and her son, Robert Maxwell, who was here from New York for the occasion.

Bride-Elect Guest at Lunch

MISS ADELINA COPELLO, daughter of Senora de Copello, whose marriage to Maj. Jerre Boggs, USAF, will take place Saturday at St. Matthews Cathedral, was the guest in whose honor Miss Margaret Acheson Lynn entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Senora de Copello, Mrs. David Lynn, mother of the hostess, and Mrs. A. J. Boggs of Pickens, S. C., mother of the prospective bridegroom, were among the guests. About Engraving On Silver Cup

What is the usual engraving on a silver gift cup for a baby boy? Should it be initials, surname, first name, or entire name? In this case there are four names altogether, so that it might run completely around the cup. Also, when a cup is the gift of a godparent, should there be any difference in the inscription? M. J. R. R.

The inscription which is placed on a cup is a matter of personal preference, but the usual inscription is the initials or the child's first name. The first name is used in preference to the family name when only one is used to distinguish the cup from the cups of other children in the family. If you wished to use the entire name, perhaps it could be placed in two or three rows, one under the other, on one side of the cup.

When the cup is the gift of the godparent, according to Emily Post, it should be inscribed with full inscription, such as:

Robert Meadows, Jr.
From his godfather
John Strong

G. C. asks for fried French doughnuts. They do not use yeast. The large amount of eggs gives the lightness. French doughnuts were one specialty in my family when we had a large chain of restaurants. French doughnuts are food for the gods, and if G. C. has scales in her kitchen she can cut down this commercial recipe to size:

2½ pounds flour (bread), 10 cups
1½ pounds shortening, 3 cups
2 quarts water (boiling), 8 cups
1 ounce salt, 2 tablespoons
3 ounces sugar, 7 tablespoons
36 eggs

(Editor's note: For your convenience I have placed the equivalent amounts in cups and tablespoons at the right of the ingredient.)

To the shortening add the boiling water. When dissolved, add dry ingredients, mixing all this with a French whip, or at least a good egg beater. It becomes a dough. To this add eggs one by one, beating rapidly. When fully combined and mixture is soft, put in a pastry bag. Heat shortening in which to fry them. Have a piece of cardboard of sufficient size to immerse in hot fat. Squeeze out of pastry bag onto cardboard, which has previously been wet with grease. Slide cardboard into hot grease and remove as they float off. Diameter of doughnuts should be about 4 inches from pastry bag when raw. Turn doughnuts as they brown. Remove when brown and puffy. Ice with powdered sugar, milk, and vanilla. This is a very yummy delicacy and I hope that G.C. will have what she is looking for. E. P.

Thank you, E. P., for sharing this choice recipe with us.

We are finishing our attic with knotty pine walls and plasterboard ceiling. Since there are only two windows—one at both ends (it is to be one long room)—we are painting the ceiling white and for the same reason feel that the walls should not be stained. Will you suggest what would be the best finish to use on the knotty pine? E. S. H.

To give the pine a finish which will keep it the present color, apply two coats of clear varnish. If you wish a dull finish with little shine, use the semigloss or dull finish varnish for the last coat. Before the varnish is applied, sand to remove any rough spots and wipe down with varsol or turpentine to clean and remove any oil which might be present on the surface.

I would like to know if there is any way of removing water drops from my china. The drops or rings were formed when I washed my china in a dishwasher with a detergent recommended by the company. M. R. T.

The deposit left on dishes when steam dried is a deposit of lime found in hard water which is left on the dishes when the water has evaporated. To remove the spots from the dishes and eliminate it in the future, use a water-softening compound in the water in addition to the detergent or soap. The present deposit can be removed easily by washing the dishes by hand, giving special attention to spotted areas.

I've Become a Dessert "Show-off"

Reddi-wip Makes Delicious Treats—Instantly

Once desserts were a problem. Then a friend told me about Reddi-wip. Now desserts are fun because with Reddi-wip you turn simplest desserts like gelatins, fruits, cupcakes, etc. into "glamor desserts"—instantly, and without work. Made with pure, rich cream flavored just right, Reddi-wip whips itself. Keeps for days in refrigerator. Economical, too.

From Your Milkman or Grocer • "It Whips Itself"

Will you please help me with a suggestion for a valance? I have a double window. My draperies are a medium shade of green with a silver-like design in them. Would a gray or silver-like shade of valance be suitable? My walls are a very light shade of green. My sofa is wine color, and a gold colored chair is right by the window. I have one rose chair, one green chair, and an American Oriental rug. C. M. E.

If the silver design in the draperies is very dominant, silver would be a good color choice for the valance. If, however, the silver design is small and does not entirely cover the drape so there is more green, I would suggest having the valance of green—a shade to exactly match that in the drape or slightly darker.

Baseball Talk Holds Man—If You Have One

So says charm expert Veronica Dengel, instructor at New York University, and author of "Hold Your Man," and "Personality, Unlimited."

"There's much more to allure than physical beauty. There's a mental approach, too. Development of both results in personality—the goal of every woman reaching for success and romance," she maintains.

Charm Is Necessary

A PRETTY face might catch a man's eye but it takes charm to hold it is Mrs. Dengel's credo. Knowing something about the subjects that interest him and being able to talk intelligently about them so he will enjoy discussing them with you is important.

This is just one part of charm, however, Mrs. Dengel points out, declaring there are major points by which personality development can be planned.

Some of the factors she stresses are:

You must realize that beauty comes from the inside, that health and good nutrition are necessary for a fine complexion and beautiful hair.

Understand your personality type, you can't change it, but you can learn how to make the most of it, and how to dress accordingly.

Study Facial Type

UNDERSTAND your facial type, because this determines the kind of coiffure and make-up needed.

On the mental approach to allure, Mrs. Dengel suggests:

Continue study, using every opportunity to further your store of information, so that your conversation will be stimulating.

Active emotional stability. This comes when you know you are looking, feeling and doing your best.

Strive for a pleasant voice—it's an important expression of your personality.

Boiled Chocolate Frosting That's Quick, Delicious

To make a quick and delicious chocolate frosting, put a package of semisweet chocolate pieces and ¾ cup evaporated milk in a small saucepan; cook slowly until the chocolate and milk blend easily when stirred together. Bring to a boil and boil gently for three to five minutes, or until thickened, stirring constantly. Stir occasionally while frosting cools; then spread.

Use Fresh Milk

Don't use evaporated milk in preparing a rennet custard since it will keep the dessert from setting. Use fresh milk only.

Takes Two Hours

Hamburger Is Versatile and Thrifty Dish

pan 8½ by 4½ inches. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 45 minutes. Serve hot with tomato sauce.

HAMBURGER really steps up in the world when it's served on a plank, accompanied by stuffed mushrooms, buttered beans, a ruffle of potatoes, a slice of pineapple and an apricot. Add rolls, butter, and piping hot coffee to the menu and you have a full and delicious meal.

PLANKED HAMBURGERS
(Serves four)

- 1 pound hamburger meat
- ¼ cup minced onion
- ½ cup dry bread crumbs
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- 2 tablespoons prepared horseradish
- ¼ cup evaporated milk
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

Combine ingredients and shape into eight cakes. Place in preheated broiler (375 degrees). Along with hamburger, place fresh or canned mushrooms stuffed with snappy cheese and bacon, sprinkled with bread crumbs. Add four slices canned pineapple, topped with four canned apricot halves. Broil 10 to 15 minutes, turning hamburgers.

Transfer to preheated individual planks and divide 1 pound julienne-style green beans, cooked and seasoned, into four portions. Decorate edge with border of mashed potatoes forced through a pastry tube. Brown potatoes under broiler with temperature raised to 550 degrees for 3 to 5 minutes.

HERE'S a recipe that combines nuts and cheese with hamburger and winds up with plenty of flavor and protein. It's a dish that will win raves for the cook, make a full meal when accompanied by tossed green salad, rolls, and an ice cream dessert.

HAMBURGER NOODLE CASSEROLE

- ¼ cup shortening
- 1 cup chopped Brazil nuts
- ¼ cup diced celery
- ¼ teaspoon tabasco
- ½ cup water
- 1¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 (8-ounce) package cottage cheese
- ½ pound ground beef
- 1/3 cup chopped onion
- 1 clove garlic
- 1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
- 3 cups cooked broad noodles
- 1 cup grated sharp cheese

Melt fat in frying pan. Add ground beef and cook until meat loses red color. Remove from pan and mix with chopped nuts. To fat, add onion, celery and garlic. Cook until tender, but do not brown. Add tabasco, canned tomato sauce, water and salt. Simmer 10 minutes. Pour ½ cup sauce into bottom of 1½-quart casserole. Add cheese, meat and nuts. Repeat until all ingredients are used, ending with meat and nuts in ring around edge of casserole. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 15 minutes. This recipe serves six.

Tips for Food

Use the colander to wash sandy lettuce. Separate the leaves, place them in a colander and let the cold water through them, washing away all sand and dirt. Drain for a few minutes and then set the colander with the leaves in it in the ice box until ready for serving. It will make the lettuce beautifully crisp.

One housewife uses paper cups to store leftover fats and dripping. The fat comes off the slightly oiled surface readily and there is no unpleasant dishwashing afterward. Besides, they take up little space.

To be certain you will not forget any ingredients of the cake you are about to bake, place all to the left of the bowl and after using set each one to the right.

VEGETABLES are "between-seasons" now, with the crops from New Jersey and other Northern States running out and the Florida produce not expected in much quantity until next week. Good buys are cauliflower, green peppers, green beans, and acorn squash.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Bedtime Story With a Sad Ending

It is high time that manufacturers of men's wear recognized modern pajama habits for what they really are.

They insist on making pajamas in sets. And the fellow who uses tops only, or bottoms only, must buy both in order to get either.

This is an extremely wasteful practice, and leads to the accumulation of great stacks of unused half-pajamas which eventually wind up in the rag bag.

It has been suggested that local men's wear stores should set an example for the manufacturers.

They might establish bulletin boards, on which tops-only and bottoms-only clients could list sizes and patterns available, and arrange mutually beneficial trades.

The trouble is that every so often it gets good and cold in Washington, and then most of us want both halves of our pajamas plus all the blankets we can get.

At such times we'd find ourselves wearing non - matching tops and bottoms, like Joe College's slacks and sport coat. And that wouldn't be so good.

LIFE IS LIKE THAT

Irene M. Chapin of 2600 17th st. ne. is a wee bit ashamed of herself these days, but she'll get over it.

You see, Irene ate her dinner at the Victory Cafeteria, 17th and E sts. nw., and then somehow managed to walk off without her purse.

By the time she discovered her loss, the Victory was closed for the night and there was nothing for Irene to do but borrow a buck to get home on—and then spend a sleepless night wondering whether she'd ever see her purse again.

In her own words, "it was a typical woman's purse, crammed to the gills with keys, identification cards, a bankbook, checkbook, snapshots — and even some money."

At 7 o'clock sharp the next morning, Irene was at the Victory Cafeteria to inquire about her purse. The boss had it waiting for her.

When she tried to give him a $10 reward, he said: "Thanks, but we don't do business that way. If we find it first, it's safe."

You'd think that instead of being ashamed of herself, Irene would be very happy. And, as a matter of fact, she was very happy. So elated that she took her purse and rushed outside to walk up and down the streets until she calmed down.

And that's the point where Irene's conscience begins to bother her because, in her excitement, she wound up eating breakfast in another cafe.

"Now that I've found somebody whose interest in life goes beyond making a fast buck," she consoles herself, "next time I'll try to remember to give him my business."

I'M A MENACE

Judy Ginsberg, currently attending Cornell University, reports that she has found a use for this column at long last: "Wracking my brains for a friend's address, where should I find it but in your space in my mail edition of The Washington Post." Then Judy adds some kinder words about the District Lion:

Dear Bill, you are a menace, lad,
To students everywhere.
We get the paper for the news
But don't get past your lair.
For instance, take my woeful case:
I weep, I sigh, I pine;
Instead of doing history
I'm trying for the Line.

DON'T FORGET TO VOTE

Tuesday is the last day to mail your "vote" on the question of continuing or eliminating the Give-Away items.

Anybody who votes, automatically gets full gripe rights in the event the decision goes against him, and I promise to listen patiently to all such complaints.

But if you don't take the trouble to vote you lose your beefing privileges—so let's get those letters and postcards in before the deadline, so that they'll be postmarked by Tuesday, November 8.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

The wisecrackers are saying: "If Phil Murray limits CIO membership to right-wingers, will any members be left?"

COMPLAINT DEPT.

The other day I wondered: "What is so rare as a well-done restaurant steak?" Answers Minnie L. Goodwin of 815 C st. sw.:

"Much more rare is the 'rare' steak that really is."

Looks like the only way to beat this thing is to eat at home.

POINT OF VIEW

"I was interested in your radio broadcast about wives who help their husbands buy clothing," writes Mrs. Charles F. Hughes of 711 32d st. se.

"I'm glad you remembered that, after all, it's we women who have to look at the clothes you men buy.

"Woodrow Wilson had a favorite limerick that expressed a somewhat similar thought. It's so old that it will probably be new to some of your younger readers, so I'm enclosing it." The enclosed jingle goes:

As a beauty I'm not a great star.
Others are handsomer far;
But my face—I don't mind it
Because I'm behind it;
It's the folks out in front that I jar.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Civilian Rule of Navy Held Basic

By Drew Pearson

What Secretary of the Navy Matthews is up against in the demotion of Admiral Louis Denfeld is not Denfeld's testimony before Congress, but the basic question of whether the Navy Department is to be run by a civilian.

Matthews

Except for stubborn old Josephus Daniels, who was thoroughly hated by the admirals, and Charles Edison, who was finally eased out by the admirals, there has been no Secretary of the Navy in the last 50 years who has really dominated the Navy Department.

In World War I not a single American soldier was lost from submarine attack while crossing the Atlantic. In World War II the death toll was so great that it was kept a strict military secret, and only afterward was it known that 4400 American troops needlessly drowned. And this did not include merchant seamen.

In addition, the sinking of merchant vessels even one year after Pearl Harbor hit the sickening total of one million tons per month. Nazi U-boats lurked along the American coast with brazen effrontery; prowled near the beaches of Atlantic City, Jacksonville and Miami.

Despite the secrecy, the American public knew that something was wrong with the Navy's defenses. But few people ever knew what went on inside.

Secretary Knox stormed, cajoled and pleaded. But he could not quickly surmount the mistake the admirals made in concentrating on big battleships at the expense of the unglamorous escort vessel. Nor could he quickly remedy the fact that no provision had been made for enough sonic or listening devices, or to train men to use them.

Another trouble was that the Navy had plans for nine different types of escort vessels, and the admirals could not decide which was best.

Finally it took a civilian, Charles E. Wilson, head of the War Production Board, to settle the question. He called in Naval Architect William F. Gibbs, who recommended a design not unlike the British corvette.

But this was not done until almost one year after Pearl Harbor.

The admirals were also urged to borrow submarine experts from the British, who had gone through two years of fighting Nazi subs, and just about had them licked. However, only one British naval officer was invited to advise the American Navy.

Subsequently the Duke of Windsor and Fred Searles of the War Shipping Administration stepped in to persuade the Navy to adopt the protective device which ultimately defeated the submarine.

The device, invented by Lieut. Comdr. Carl Herluf Holm, a Danish-born American naval officer, got bogged down between three Navy bureaus, all rivals—Naval Ordnance Laboratory, Bureau of Ships, and Bureau of Ordnance. Between them, the invention remained stymied for two whole years—while American ships and lives were being sent daily to the bottom of the sea.

It was Fred Searles who, learning of the invention from the duke, warned the admirals that if they did not immediately use this antisubmarine weapon, the Maritime Commission would use it independently.

That was how the most important antisubmarine device of the entire war came into being. It illustrates what Frank Knox was up against in his struggle to run a department where the admirals kept him in the dark, ignored him, or went over his head to the White House.

At the time Frank Knox died the admirals made it a practice to meet in formal session, show him a few routine cables, then adjourn. Later they handled the really important war cables which Knox never knew existed.

When James Forrestal became Secretary of the Navy his former aide, Capt. John Gingrich, tipped him off to this practice, suggested that Forrestal go up to the communications room and look over the other telegrams the admirals held out on him.

This Forrestal did. Simultaneously, Captain Gingrich got disciplined. The top brass relegated him to the innocuous job of Chief of Personnel at Miami, Fla.

That was the turning point in Forrestal's running of the Navy—not unlike Secretary Matthews' crisis with Denfeld today. He ordered Gingrich back to Washington as Deputy Chief of Personnel, appointed Admiral Denfeld Chief of Personnel, and things went smoothly for Forestal.

Naval Merry-Go-Round

Admiral Arthur Radford, when leaving Washington for Pearl Harbor, told disciples: "We're in this thing to stay and we'll win or sink." . . . Radford is the admiral who touched off the Navy revolt . . . Operation 23, the Navy propaganda unit, has started a whispering campaign against Admiral Forrest Sherman. They call him the "Quisling of the Navy"—for supporting unification . . . President Truman has told friends he is going to ax several high-ranking Air Force generals if they don't quit scheming to build a 70-group Air Force.
